Companionate

Someone asks me to express my views on companionate marriages in this column. That seems a fruitless task. I'm a bachelor. What do I know about companionate marriages? And who would believe me if I did voice an opinion? But I value this friend's friendship. And I told him I would. So please bear with me. I'd say that any kind of a marriage should be of the companionate sort. Too many are not. The husband and wife should be real companions all through life. That is, if they are desirous of enjoying real marital bliss. They ought to be buddies. They should try and enjoy the same things. If he likes a football game, she should go with him to one now and then. If he doesn't care about bridge, but she does, he ought to play bridge with her at least once in awhile. That is what I would call the real companionate marriage. As for "trial marriages," I'm against them. Marriage isn't a trial. It's a sacred obligation that should last a life-time, and not be disrupted when the party of the first part or the party of the second part decide that the "trial" hasn't been a success. Be sure for yourself before you shoulder any obligation. And that goes for every vow, not simply marriage. The trouble is today, marriage is taken about as lightly as the first installment on an automobile.

Calendars

There is some talk of changing the calendar. They've changed just about everything else in this taming old world, and we suppose the days and the months and the weeks are due for a shakeup, too. That starts one to thinking about Time, and wondering just what difference it would make whether we had months or not. For instance, this year has one more day than the past three. We talk of the fact that seasons are changing and that winter may soon become summer, and summer become winter. Why not? If a day is added each year in four, to the calendar, as is being done now, figure it out—you statisticians—how long it will be before this occurs. Adding a day would eventually bring that to pass, would it not? We don't know. We're just a newspaper writer trying to get along in this world, and he is enlightened now and then. But it looks so probable that we'd like to have your opinion as to just when you'll be going around in your shirt sleeves in February.

A Trip To Venus

An Ohio man is after Lindy's crown. He is Robert Condit, now at Miami Beach, Fla. Condit is awaiting favorable conditions for a 50,000-mile-rocket-flight to Venus. Condit is different than the heroes of Jules Verne stories. He wants to go further away from earth than any man in the history of the world. He claims he has perfected a rocket-like contraption for the flight. Venus, he claims, is a true sister of the earth, of practically the same size and atmospheric conditions. Once out of range of the earth's gravity he believes he can make the trip easily. His flight must be made before March 4, in order to take advantage of the meteoric "stream motive power," as he calls it. People are still wondering about Venus, Mars and a few of the other planets. We learn a little more about them as time goes on. But in all probability, our curiosity concerning just what is going on up there will never be satisfied. There are certain things on this earth and about it that we will never know of. It was not intended that man should be all-seeing and all-powerful. The largeness and the mystery of these planets serve their purpose in showing man just what a small atom he is and are good for his egotism. We don't expect much from this rocket trip.

Thirteen Spades

A Columbus man, Frank Alexich, a senior in dentistry, held thirteen spades in a bridge game the other night and all the papers, including this one, had something to say about it. Marvelous! But what of the man who holds a spade in his hand for eight, ten or twelve hours a day, building foundations, digging ditches and engineering life into smoother channels, bettering living conditions, making this a more desirable world. His praises are unsung, unless he gets arrested for taking an illegal drink or isn't able to support his family on meagre wages and is held for failure to provide. The world is fun-

Hickman Asks New Trial; Delays Sentence

FOX'S LAWYERS ASSERT CLIENT DENIED RIGHTS

Pronouncement of Slayer's
Fate Is Postponed Until Tuesday After Motion

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 11.—Contending that William Edward Hickman has been deprived of his rights of a trial by jury on the charge of kidnapping and murdering 12-year-old Marion Parker, counsel for Hickman today asked that "the Fox" be granted a new trial.

The sentence which Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco was expected to pronounce today was continued until Tuesday morning.

The new law, which allowed Hickman to enter a plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity," places only the question of sanity in the hands of the jury, leaving the determination of the decree of guilty up to the judge. From this particular phase of the law, Hickman's attorneys are expected to hold their argument of unconstitutionality in the event that their request for a new trial is denied.

Although Judge Trabucco has given no positive forecast of the nature of the sentence which he intends to impose, it is believed that he will sentence Hickman to death on the gallows. He has said that he will give the defendant "all that the law allows."

Upon Judge Trabucco's determination of the degree of Hickman's guilt depends the question of whether life imprisonment or hanging will be the sentence.

The possibility that the judge may seek further evidence before passing sentence in current reports that he plans to call Perry M. Parker, father of the murdered girl, and other witnesses before him.

Meanwhile, the convicted Kansas City youth maintained his quiescence in his cell in the county jail.

Although Hickman faces another murder charge together with former accomplice, Welby Hunt 16, indications were that District Attorney Asa Keyes would not prosecute, but would rest on the "sane" verdict in the Marion Parker kidnapping-murder trial. Hickman and Hunt are jointly charged with the murder of C. Ivy Thoms, druggist, during a gun duel on Christmas Eve, 1926.

SINGERS TO GIVE 2 MORE CONCERTS

The Kentucky Harmony Singers, headed by Mrs. Louise Malone Braxton, a woman bass singer, made a decided hit Friday night when they sang at the colored Baptist church on West Mill street.

The church was crowded to the doors and there were more white people there than there were colored. The popularity of their concert is attested by the fact that they were asked and have consented to give two concerts in Circleville Sunday.

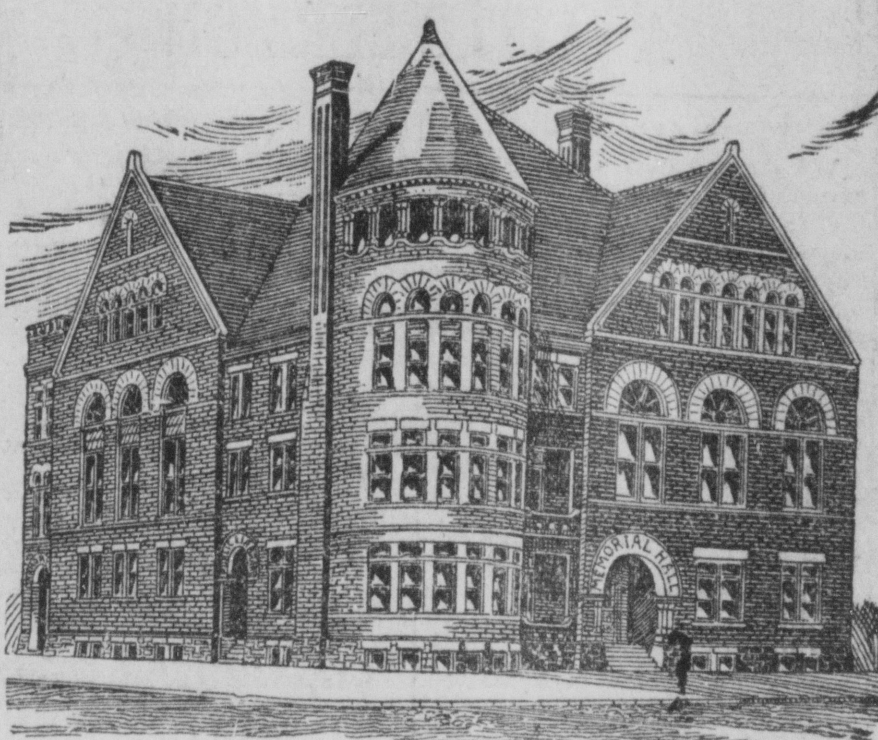

The first will be at 3 p. m., at the A. M. E. church on South Pickaway street and the second will be at 7 p. m., at the First Presbyterian church.

Featured among their songs Friday night were: "Let's Go Down to Jordan," "Hand Me Down the Silver Trumpet," "Kentucky Bells," "Building not Made With Hands" and "Who Swallowed Jonah?" Mrs. Braxton demonstrated without a doubt that she is a bass singer when she sang "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

INFANT DAUGHTER DIES

A daughter, born to Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Fletcher, of Pearl street, died at birth Friday. Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m., Saturday at the home. Burial will be in Forest cemetery in charge of the W. H. Albaugh company.

Trustees of Memorial Hall Ask Aid in Repairing of Auditorium

MEMORIAL HALL

Plans Call For New Stage Furniture And Curtain to Provide Modern Equipment For Home Talent Entertainments—Officials Serving Without Pay.

By O. H. SPENCER

Memorial Hall was a present from the patriotic citizens of Pickaway county, to her Soldiers who served in any of the wars of the United States. There is no other building like it in the state. It was built by your soldiers of the Memorial Association and it has been managed by them since it was finished, and it has been occupied by your soldiers who were present at the battle of Lake Erie, on the day that Commodore Perry, sent his famous dispatch to his general, "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Then came the men who went to Mexico when the war cry was, "Remember the Alamo."

Then came by hundreds, your "Boys in Blue," after four long years of Service.

Then once again when the war cry was, "Remember the Maine," you sent Co. M. They reached the enemy's country and did honorable service. When they came back home and stacked arms, the sun shone on the Flag every hour of the twenty-four, and they had brought you an Empire in the Atlantic and Pacific.

Once again when the Bugles began to sing, "Johnny Get Your Gun," Co. F. was sent to the Rio Grande, to see what all the fuss was about, and when their work was done, they returned to Memorial Hall to rest, recruit and rest, but there was little rest for them, for soon the Old Flag pointed to the front again, and they followed it across the seas, to become a part of the famous "Rainbow Division," of the A. E. F.

Just imagine the surprise of the Kaiser, when he saw the Flags of the "Rainbow Division" coming out of the mists of the morning, at Chateau Thierry. It was the hand writing on the wall for him. He became rattled, and abandoned his throne, deserted his comrades and his flag in the face of the enemy, and fled to a far off country, to hide behind the wide petticoats of a Dutch Vron. All of our soldiers were victorious soldiers, and brought back their Flags, without the loss of a single star.

Some of your A. E. F. boys came back and they now touch elbows with old comrades of other wars, in Memorial Hall. May they be with you a long time. After 35 years of hard usage, Memorial Hall was in need of repairs. This has been done by the City and Trustees.

Memorial Room has been repaired by putting in a new steel ceiling, painting the walls, floors repaired and finished in hard oil. Beautiful electric lights were put in, and also a new toilet room. These improvements make it one of the most beautiful Halls in the building, and the work was paid for by the Trustees, The American Legion, the American Legion Auxiliary and Groce Post.

Next comes the big assembly hall, which is very much in need of repairs, and betterment.

The trustees have made arrangements with Queen City Studios,

Inc., of Buffalo, N. Y., to put in a complete set of scenery on the stage, with necessary lights. Much needed dressing rooms and new stage furniture will be put in by the trustees, making it an up-to-date Amusement Hall, and a place for all home entertainments. To do this the trustees will need some assistance. To help us out, the Scenic Company will sell advertising space on the front curtain. When their agent calls on you, we hope that you will meet him with a smile, and give him an Ad. Assembly Hall is a busy place, and is an ideal place for an advertisement. None of the members of the Memorial Association have been allowed pay for their services. Their work has been a labor of gratitude, in remembrance of our kind and loyal friends, who have assisted us in our time of need. As the years have gone by, our membership has become very small, but now the boys of the Legion, are touching elbows with us, and filling up the vacant places in our ranks, and our Flag will be kept floating over Memorial Hall.

Thanking you all for the many favors in the past, and for those to come, we are yours in Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty.

G. W. Trimmer, President, Sergeant, Co. H. 62nd Regt. O. V. I. Jas. A. Graham, Vice President, Private, Co. A. 114th Regt. O. V. I. Chas. A. Gussman, Secretary, Captain 16th Infantry.

Mack D. Parrett, Treasurer, Sergeant, Major, Infantry.

O. H. Spencer, Supt. Private, Co. A. 27th Regt. O. V. I.

EXPECT FLINT TRIAL TO LAST TO WEDNESDAY

Defense Attorneys Will Begin
Introduction of Their Evidence on Monday.

With court adjourned over Saturday and Sunday until Monday, the prospects now are that the trial of James Flint, alias Walter Brown, colored, who is charged with first degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting of John Henry Hill, also colored, on Nov. 14, 1927, will not reach the point where the case will be placed in the hands of the jury until Wednesday.

The trial has already lasted five days, three of which were required to empanel a jury. The state, however, is nearing the end of its presentation of its case as Wade "Big Easy" Bivens, the last direct witness of the prosecution, has taken the stand. When court adjourned Friday evening for the week end, Bivens was undergoing cross examination by the defense attorneys.

This cross examination will be concluded Monday morning and then the defense is expected to begin the introduction of its testimony and evidence. The defense probably will require two days to present its case to the jury.

In his testimony Friday afternoon, "Big Easy" told practically the same story of the actual slaying as did Earl Mallett and Willie Jones, two other eye witnesses of the slaying. The jury and the court had difficulty in understanding Bivens, a New Orleans colored man, because of his rapid speech, slurred words and low voice. His hands, however, were eloquent in their gestures, but these could not be placed in the court record.

CONVICT SENT BY PICKAWAY GETS FREEDOM

Levi Saultz, of Lancaster, Put in Penitentiary For Forgery Is Paroled.

Levi Saultz, alias James L. Saultz, who was sentenced in 1923 to serve an indeterminate sentence for forgery in the Ohio penitentiary from Pickaway county, is among the 10 prisoners at the Columbus institution who have been granted final releases on parole by the state board of clemency at its February meeting.

This is the latest entry in the criminal record of Saultz, who originally came from Lancaster, O. In 1918 he was arrested at Ray, O., on a charge of burglary, but was discharged. The same year, he was sent to the U. S. Disciplinary barracks at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., to serve two years for disrespect to an officer.

He soon regained his freedom, however, and less than a year later he was received at the Ohio reformatory at Mansfield from Vinton county to serve an indeterminate sentence for larceny. He was paroled from the reformatory in 1920.

In 1921 he was again sent to the U. S. Disciplinary barracks from Camp Sherman for desertion and fraudulent enlistment. In 1922 he was declared a parole violator and was wanted at the Ohio reformatory, but never reached there, being sentenced to the penitentiary from Pickaway county for forgery in the meantime.

GEO. X. CANNON GAINS FAME IN PHONE CIRCLES

Native of Circleville Elected
President of Illinois Utilities Group.

George X. Cannon, a former resident of Circleville, is president and general manager of the Stephenson Telephone company, and general manager of the three allied organizations; the Lancaster, the Cedarville, the Pearl City Independent and the Pitcher Telephone companies covering Stephenson and Jo Davis counties, in Illinois with some 12,000 telephones.

Since he left school as a youngster, says the Freeport Journal-Standard, and landed his first job as a groundman with a line building outfit back in Ohio, Mr. Cannon has worked through every phase of the business and a tribute to his ability is his election to the presidency of the Illinois State Association, comprised of between 600 and 700 companies.

In the ten years which have passed since he became the directing head of the local organization there has been a growth of practically 50 per cent in the number of telephones in use, while the growth of the district has been relatively small.

Mr. Cannon was born in this city. He was a member of a family of nine children. His parents were the late Michael and Margaret McCarthy Cannon, and he received his education and graduated from St. Joseph's Parochial school in this city.

He is a member of the Freeport Elks club, the Knights of Columbus, the Rotary club and the Freeport Country club.

Mr. Cannon is a cousin of Miss Loretta McGinnis, linotype operator of The Herald.

BLAST DEATH TOLL REACHES THIRTEEN

EVERETT, Mass., Feb. 11.—(INS)—Death toll in the explosion and fire horror at the plant of the Beacon Oil company was swelled to thirteen today.

Ten bodies were found within the ruined plant by firemen as soon as they were able to battle their way inside.

Today two injured died at Massachusetts General hospital, Boston. In addition, workers today sighted a body of a man jammed in the wreckage. This brought the known dead to thirteen. Firemen and other searchers continued to dig in the debris for other bodies. Four workmen are missing.

in Charge of Effort to Reach Every Home.

The Circleville Herald and Union-Herald today announce the most liberal and attractive circulation campaign ever inaugurated in Central Ohio. The campaign will be known as a "salesmanship club" campaign and will cover all of Pickaway county. The Salesmanship Club Campaign is just what its name implies. Potentially, we are all salesman, lacking only the one big opportunity to turn this natural gift into profit. Anyone of us may have latent powers within us which, when developed will lead to heights of achievements and affluence.

The Herald and Union-Herald always endeavoring to be at the front in all matters of progress and development therefore offers the energetic men and women and young people of this community an opportunity to test abilities in salesmanship, without investing ONE CENT—NOW OR LATER—in the undertaking. Experience is not necessary. All that is required is a little directed energy. The art of salesmanship is being expounded by all the leading business concerns today. The Herald and Union-Herald have therefore decided to use this method to place the Herald and Union-Herald in every home in Pickaway county and in many of those counties adjoining, for while The Herald and Union Herald already enjoys a wide circulation in this community, with increased working facilities its scope of usefulness can be greatly increased by the addition of one or two thousand new readers. The easiest thing to sell today in this country is subscriptions to a live newspaper, and we believe that this campaign in which over three thousand five hundred dollars worth of prizes and commissions will be given away absolutely free, will strike a popular note among our people. We will pay our workers very handsomely indeed. We will give a Grand Prize, and six other valuable prizes will be awarded, therefore the winner of the Buick will be paid at the average of $160 per week. Therefore whatever selling ability you possess can be tested now—with absolutely nothing to lose and tremendous profits to be gained.

With this end in view we have planned and today make full announcement of a very liberal campaign, outlining in full the rules governing the campaign and trusting that our people will recognize the wisdom of starting immediately in this campaign by sending in their name so that no delay will result in getting started. This proposition is for energetic people only, and we know that the value of the prizes and liberal cash commissions to be paid are such as to attract the interest of many representative people in Pickaway and adjoining counties.

An Unusual Campaign.

This is NOT a Beauty or Popularity "Contest," but a test of salesmanship ability. The awards will go to the best salespeople either married or single, but everyone will share in the awards to a more or less degree—depending entirely upon the effort put into the work, for a cash commission will be paid all who remain active throughout the campaign and who fail to win one of the several prizes offered.

The prizes for this campaign were purchased of business men whom you know and trust. The prizes are standard and can be verified by going to the different merchants where they were purchased. A glance at the list will convince the most skeptical that they are well worth the hardest effort possible. Any fair minded person will at once agree that this is the finest list of prizes ever offered by any paper in a city twice the size of Circleville and well worth the small amount of work required to win them. These prizes will be given absolutely free and with no strings attached. A commission of ten per cent will be paid to every candidate who remains active throughout the campaign and who does not win a prize.

The Plan in Detail

The Herald and Union Herald wants more readers, and will give the valuable prizes listed above absolutely free to an equal number of people securing the greatest number of subscribers to The Herald and Union Herald. Here is the proposition briefly. Every community will have its representative who will handle and sell the Herald and Union Herald during the next two weeks. With every subscription paid in advance either new or old, a certain number of credits or votes will be allowed. The workers will be known as candidates, and while every township will have its workers, yet the candidates will not be held to their own community while soliciting subscriptions but may secure them anywhere. Receipt books will be furnished the candi-

EXPECT FLINT TRIAL TO LAST TO WEDNESDAY

Defense Attorneys Will Begin
Introduction of Their Evidence on Monday.

With court adjourned over Saturday and Sunday until Monday, the prospects now are that the trial of James Flint, alias Walter Brown, colored, who is charged with first degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting of John Henry Hill, also colored, on Nov. 14, 1927, will not reach the point where the case will be placed in the hands of the jury until Wednesday.

The trial has already lasted five days, three of which were required to empanel a jury. The state, however, is nearing the end of its presentation of its case as Wade "Big Ease" Eivens, the last direct witness of the prosecution, has taken the stand. When court adjourned Friday evening for the week end, Eivens was undergoing cross examination by the defense attorneys.

This cross examination will be concluded Monday morning and then the defense is expected to begin the introduction of its testimony and evidence. The defense probably will require two days to present its case to the jury.

In his testimony Friday afternoon, "Big Ease" told practically the same story of the actual slaying as did Earl Mallett and Willie Jones, two other eye witnesses of the slaying. The jury and the court had difficulty in understanding Eivens, a New Orleans colored man, because of his rapid speech, slurred words and low voice. His hands, however, were eloquent in their gestures, but these could not be placed in the court record.

CONVICT SENT BY PICKAWAY GETS FREEDOM

Levi Saultz, of Lancaster, Put in Penitentiary For Forgery Is Paroled.

Levi Saultz, alias James L. Saultz, who was sentenced in 1923 to serve an indeterminate sentence for forgery in the Ohio penitentiary from Pickaway county, is among the 10 prisoners at the Columbus institution who have been granted final releases on parole by the state board of clemency at its February meeting.

This is the latest entry in the criminal record of Saultz, who originally came from Lancaster, O. In 1918 he was arrested at Ray, O., on a charge of burglary, but was discharged. The same year, he was sent to the U. S. Disciplinary barracks at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., to serve two years for disrespect to an officer.

He soon regained his freedom, however, and less than a year later he was received at the Ohio reformatory at Mansfield from Vinton county to serve an indeterminate sentence for larceny. He was paroled from the reformatory in 1920.

In 1921 he was again sent to the U. S. Disciplinary barracks from Camp Sherman for desertion and fraudulent enlistment. In 1922 he was declared a parole violator and was wanted at the Ohio reformatory, but never reached there, being sentenced to the penitentiary from Pickaway county for forgery in the meantime.

GEO. X. CANNON GAINS FAME IN PHONE CIRCLES

Native of Circleville Elected
President of Illinois Utilities Group.

George X. Cannon, a former resident of Circleville, is president and general manager of the Stephenson Telephone company, and general manager of the three allied organizations; the Lancaster, the Cedarville, the Pearl City Independent and the Pitcher Telephone companies covering Stephenson and Jo Davis counties, in Illinois with some 12,000 telephones.

Since he left school as a youngster, says the Freeport Journal-Standard, and landed his first job as a groundman with a line building outfit back in Ohio, Mr. Cannon has worked through every phase of the business and a tribute to his ability is his election to the presidency of the Illinois State Association, comprised of between 600 and 700 companies.

In the ten years which have passed since he became the directing head of the local organization there has been a growth of practically 50 per cent in the number of telephones in use, while the growth of the district has been relatively small.

Mr. Cannon was born in this city. He was a member of a family of nine children. His parents were the late Michael and Margaret McCarthy Cannon, and he received his education and graduated from St. Joseph's Parochial school in this city.

He is a member of the Freeport Elks club, the Knights of Columbus, the Rotary club and the Freeport Country club.

Mr. Cannon is a cousin of Miss Loretta McGinnis, linotype operator of The Herald.

BLAST DEATH TOLL REACHES THIRTEEN

EVERETT, Mass., Feb. 11—(INS)—Death toll in the explosion and fire horror at the plant of the Beacon Oil company was swelled to thirteen today.

Ten bodies were found within the ruined plant by firemen as soon as they were able to battle their way inside.

Today two injured died at Massachusetts General hospital, Boston. In addition, workers today sighted a body of a man jammed in the wreckage. This brought the known dead to thirteen. Firemen and other searchers continued to dig in the debris for other bodies. Four workmen are missing.

$1375 Buick Sedan and Chevrolet Sedan Offered as Competition
Opens For Nominations of Salesmen—W. B. Chance
in Charge of Effort to Reach Every Home.

The Circleville Herald and Union-Herald today announce the most liberal and attractive circulation campaign ever inaugurated in Central Ohio. The campaign will be known as a "salesmanship club" campaign and will cover all of Pickaway county. The Salesmanship Club Campaign is just what its name implies. Potentially, we are all salesmen, lacking only the one big opportunity to turn this natural gift into profit. Anyone of us may have latent powers within us which, when developed will lead to heights of achievements and affluence.

The Herald and Union-Herald always endeavoring to be at the front in all matters of progress and development therefore offers the energetic men and women and young people of this community an opportunity to test abilities in salesmanship, without investing ONE CENT—NOW OR LATER—in the undertaking. Experience is not necessary. All that is required is a little directed energy. The art of salesmanship is being expounded by all the leading business concerns today. The Herald and Union-Herald have therefore decided to use this method to place the Herald and Union-Herald in every home in Pickaway county and in many of those counties adjoining, for while The Herald and Union Herald already enjoys a wide circulation in this community, with increased working facilities its scope of usefulness can be greatly increased by the addition of one or two thousand new readers.

The easiest thing to sell today in this country is subscriptions to a live newspaper, and we believe that this campaign in which over three thousand five hundred dollars worth of prizes and commissions will be given away absolutely free, will strike a popular note among our people. We will pay our workers very handsomely indeed. We will give a Grand Prize, and six other valuable prizes will be awarded, therefore the winner of the Buick will be paid at the average of $160 per week. Therefore whatever selling ability you possess can be tested now—with absolutely nothing to lose and tremendous profits to be gained.

With this end in view we have planned and today make full announcement of a very liberal campaign, outlining in full the rules governing the campaign and trusting that our people will recognize the wisdom of starting immediately in this campaign by sending in their name so that no delay will result in getting started. This proposition is for energetic people only, and we know that the value of the prizes and liberal cash commissions to be paid are such as to attract the interest of many representative people in Pickaway and adjoining counties.

An Unusual Campaign.

This is NOT a Beauty or Popularity "Contest," but a test of salesmanship ability. The awards will go to the best salespeople either married or single, but everyone will share in the awards to a more or less degree—depending entirely upon the effort put into the work, for a cash commission will be paid all who remain active throughout the campaign and who fail to win one of the several prizes offered.

The prizes for this campaign were purchased of business men whom you know and trust. The prizes are standard and can be verified by going to the different merchants where they were purchased. A glance at the list will convince the most skeptical that they are well worth the hardest effort possible. Any fair minded person will at once agree that this is the finest list of prizes ever offered by any paper in a city twice the size of Circleville and well worth the small amount of work required to win them. These prizes will be given absolutely free and with no strings attached! A commission of ten per cent will be paid to every candidate who remains active throughout the campaign and who does not win a prize.

The Plan in Detail
The Herald and Union Herald wants more readers, and will give the valuable prizes listed above absolutely free to an equal number of people securing the greatest number of subscribers to The Herald and Union Herald. Here is the proposition briefly. Every community will have its representative who will handle and sell the Herald and Union Herald during the next two weeks. With every subscription paid in advance either new or old, a certain number of credits or votes will be known as candidates, and while every township will have its workers, yet the candidates will not be held to their own community while soliciting subscriptions but may secure them anywhere. Receipt books will be furnished the candi-

THE FIRST THING TO DO

Decide at once that you are going to become the owner of one of the big prizes, then clip the nomination blank on the page announcement, fill out with your name and address plainly and either bring it or send it to the Campaign Manager at The Herald office. Get a receipt book, and full particulars of how to win, then get right out among your friends and secure new subscribers and renewals. Remember that while the idea of the campaign is to secure NEW subscriptions, and while more votes are given for new subscribers, yet a liberal number of votes are given for renewals. All you have to do is to see them and collect their subscription, either new or old, give them a receipt for their money and once every week send or bring the subscriptions to this office and votes will be issued for same.

In case you cannot come personally to The Herald office right receipts for subscriptions at the regular price, and report them on subscription blanks provided by The Herald.

Rule No. 7—The Herald and Union Herald reserves the right to reject the name of objectionable candidates. This campaign must be high and above board, fair and square and above suspicion.

Rule No. 8—Every candidate who participates in this campaign actively by turning in four or more subscriptions each week, either old or new, for one year or more, during the life of the campaign will be paid a commission of 10 per cent on all they turn in on subscriptions. This rule allows all active candidates a reward for their efforts.

Rule No. 9—The salespeople will be divided in clubs of 4, 5 or 6 people each by the manager and will compete with each other for certain special credits allowed for new subscriptions only.

Rule No. 10—Should a candidate fail to report for two weeks in succession his or her name may be dropped from the list at the discretion of the manager.

Rule No. 11—Any questions that may arise between candidates will be determined by The Herald and its decisions will be absolute and final. By the filing of the nomination blank all candidates accept and agree to the above conditions.

The time for nominations is right now, be one of the first to send in your name; get a receipt book and get busy make up your mind that you are going to win that automobile, and start out TODAY after subscription votes. away, phone or write the Campaign Manager, and he will either send or bring the necessary working materials, and full particulars to you at once.

RULES GOVERNING THE CAMPAIGN

Rule No. 1—Any man, woman, boy or girl over fourteen years of age, married or single, residing in Pickaway and adjoining counties will be eligible to enter this campaign.

Rule No. 2—This campaign officially opens Feb. 13 and will close Saturday, April 14.

Rule No. 3—No salaried employee or close relative of same, of The Circleville Pub. Co. will be allowed to participate in the campaign as a candidate.

Rule No. 4—A board of responsible business men will be chosen to act as judges at the close and award the prizes according to the campaign plan. The decision of this board will be final and admit of no appeal except for cause.

Rule No. 5—Votes cannot be transferred from one candidate to another, nor can one candidate's name be submitted for another after the first two weeks of the campaign. Votes cannot be bought or sold under any conditions whatever. Should a candidate withdraw from the race his votes will NOT be credited to another candidate, but will be irretrievably lost.

Rule No. 6—Candidates will give lost that can never be recalled. The early starters will stand to win the prizes for the reason that more votes are given the first half of the campaign than will be given the last half. Therefore, if you intend to take up the work and make yourself richer by owning a valuable prize, enter NOW, right today, and get the right start. It will not be a hard matter to win the prizes, for everyone nowadays is anxious to read the latest news, and The Herald is leading every day in the latest features. Your friends can have no logical reason for not subscribing to one of the papers.

ONE THING MORE

The campaign will be conducted absolutely on the square. The manager will have no more interest in one candidate than another. You are requested to come in and see him; have him explain the plan to you in detail. Nothing will be conducted behind closed doors. Every candidate will have the advantage of reporting in private and not one will have the slightest knowledge of any one candidate's vote until after the judges make their final awards. Anyone entering this campaign may rest assured of a fair and square deal in every respect. Their interests will be safe-guarded, yet no one will receive any favors that cannot be shown the other candidates. Everyone is urged to become interested in this big campaign. The publishers have

SPECIAL VOTE OFFER FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

Here is a special vote offer which will count for much when it comes to deciding the Grand Prize Winner at the close. It is actually possible to secure as many as 96,000 votes for one single subscription. Read this over carefully then act accordingly.

Beginning Feb. 13, and closing Friday evening, Feb. 24, every NEW Subscription for one year or more will count TRIPLE the regular number of votes. Get this right in your mind then act. LISTEN—A regular NEW Subscriber for one year by carrier costs $6.00 and counts 15,000 votes. During the next week only, such a subscription will actually count 45,000 votes. A two year ($12) regular counts 32,000 votes, during this period will count 96,000. THINK what TEN such subscriptions would count—nearly a million votes. THIS is the last time this offer will appear. Now is the time to take advantage of it.

done what they considered right in the matter, they have given the people of this community the opportunity; it is now up to you to take a hold of this rare chance, or let someone else win the prize.

A LITTLE SERMON

The World Is Ours—If we do not forfeit our souls—or violate our conscience—in trying to amass great wealth—Millionaires pack upon their backs great burdens to accomplish their ambition to be among the very rich. A slave has but one master. The ambitious man has as many masters as there are persons whose aid may contribute to the advancement of his fortunes. The great mansions of earth are built by ambitious men to gratify their vanity to out do their fellows.

These men find their burdens too heavy and ere their lives are half way to old age—fall under their weight. These men overlook many bits of beautiful scenery; they are as a rule blind to the beauties of the great mountains capped with snow—such things do not refresh his weary brain. The poppy fields attract him not. The fragrance of the orange grove gives way to the utilitarian urge of his mind—he is absorbed with the problem. "Does it pay?" Great estates are built by ambitious men—that in later years become a burden to their owners.

"Much having shows how little mortals know—Much wealth—how little worldlings can enjoy—At best it babies us with endless toys And keeps us children till we drop to dust."

Spend thy wealth in a journey far To the mountains or to the restless sea. You will find stored away in after year A memory of the beauty you discovered there.

One of the great sins of the present day is the undue and unlawful love of money and its power. The courts are filled with young murderers and outlaws. They are turned loose upon the public to bring more degenerates into the world—for future generations to cope with. Shakespeare says of "murder." "Beyond the infinite and boundless reach of Mercy. If thou didst this deed of Death, Art thou damned" but this does not protect the innocent public here—whatever the punishment may be hereafter. Many of these young men cannot murder when they go out to easy money. Money earned by an honest day's work is the best.—Anon.

The dense smoke and fumes from refuse and old powder boxes has penetrated into the lowest of the mine and the chance of bringing the trapped men out alive is slight.

Rule No. 2—This campaign officially opens Feb. 13 and will close Saturday, April 14.

Rule No. 3—No salaried employee or close relative of same, of The Circleville Pub. Co. will be allowed to participate in the campaign as a candidate.

Rule No. 4—A board of responsible business men will be chosen to act as judges at the close and award the prizes according to the campaign plan. The decision of this board will be final and admit of no appeal except for cause.

Rule No. 5—Votes cannot be transferred from one candidate to another, nor can one candidate's name be submitted for another after the first two weeks of the campaign. Votes cannot be bought or sold under any conditions whatever. Should a candidate withdraw from the race his votes will NOT be credited to another candidate, but will be irrevocably lost.

Rule No. 6—Candidates will give lost that can never be recalled. The early starters will stand to win the prizes for the reason that more votes are given the first half of the campaign than will be given the last half. Therefore, if you intend to take up the work and make yourself richer by owning a valuable prize, enter NOW, right today, and get the right start. It will not be a hard matter to win the prizes, for everyone nowadays is anxious to read the latest news, and The Herald is leading every day in the latest features. Your friends can have no logical reason for not subscribing to one of the papers.

ONE THING MORE

The campaign will be conducted absolutely on the square. The manager will have no more interest in one candidate than another. You are requested to come in and see him; have him explain the plan to you in detail. Nothing will be conducted behind closed doors. Every candidate will have the advantage of reporting in private and not one will have the slightest knowledge of any one candidate's vote until after the judges make their final awards. Anyone entering this campaign may rest assured of a fair and square deal in every respect. Their interests will be safe-guarded, yet no one will receive any favors that cannot be shown the other candidates. Everyone is urged to become interested in this big campaign. The publishers have done what they considered right in the matter, they have given the people of this community the opportunity; it is now up to you to take a hold of this rare chance, or let someone else win the prize.

SPECIAL VOTE OFFER FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

Here is a special vote offer which will count for much when it comes to deciding the Grand Prize Winner at the close. It is actually possible to secure as many as 96,000 votes for one single subscription. Read this over carefully then act accordingly.

Beginning Feb. 13, and closing Friday evening, Feb. 24, every NEW Subscription for one year or more will count TRIPLE the regular number of votes. Get this right in your mind then act. LISTEN—A regular NEW Subscriber for one year by carrier costs $6.00 and counts 15,000 votes. During the next week only, such a subscription will actually count 45,000 votes. A two year ($12) regular counts 32,000 votes, during this period will count 96,000. THINK what TEN such subscriptions would count—nearly a million votes. THIS is the last time this offer will appear. Now is the time to take advantage of it.

A LITTLE SERMON

The World Is Ours—If

We do not forfeit our souls—or violate our conscience—in trying to amass great wealth—Millionaires pack upon their backs great burdens to accomplish their ambition to be among the very rich. A slave has but one master. The ambitious man has as many masters as there are persons whose aid may contribute to the advancement of his fortunes. The great mansions of earth are built by ambitious men to gratify their vanity to out do their fellows.

These men find their burdens too heavy and ere their lives are half way to old age—fall under their weight. These men overlook many bits of beautiful scenery; they are as a rule blind to the beauties of the great mountains capped with snow—such things do not refresh his weary brain. The poppy fields attract him not. The fragrance of the orange grove gives way to the utilitarian urge of his mind—he is absorbed with the problem. "Does it pay?" Great estates are built by ambitious men—that in later years become a burden to their owners.

"Much having shows how little mortals know—Much wealth—how little worldlings can enjoy—At best it babies us with endless toys And keeps us children till we drop to dust."

Spend thy wealth in a journey far To the mountains or to the restless sea. You will find stored away in after year A memory of the beauty you discovered there.

One of the great sins of the present day is the undue and unlawful love of money and its power. The courts are filled with young murderers and outlaws. They are turned loose upon the public to bring more degenerates into the world—for future generations to cope with. Shakespeare says of "murder," "Beyond the infinite and boundless reach of Mercy. If thou didst this deed of Death, Art thou damned" but this does not protect the innocent public here—whatever the punishment may be hereafter. Many of these young men cannot murder when they go out to easy money. Money earned by an honest day's work is the best.—Anon.

TIMMINS, Ont. Feb. 11—(INS)—With at least six persons known dead, this little place waited anxiously today for the arrival of the rescue train that is rushing with special smoke fighting equipment in a last desperate effort to save the lives of 40 other men who are still trapped in the fire-swept Hollinger mine.

The dense smoke and fumes from refuse and old powder boxes has penetrated into the lowest of the mine and the chance of bringing the trapped men out alive is slight.

Making Health Contagious a Laudable New Ambition

WHY NOT AVOID ILLS, AND THUS MEDICINE?

Ideal State Would Be Attained When Doctors Would Be Used as Teachers Instead of Practitioners, Dr. Copeland's View.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IN ONE of his orations Cicero said, "In nothing do men approach more near the gods than in giving health to men."

I can conceive of no higher ambition in life than attempting to improve the health and vigor of the human race. Every time a new food goes on the market, every time a physician gives advice to his patients, the human family is being benefited, and Heaven smiles in consequence. I am sure the amount of illness in the world will decrease materially when good health becomes a sort of religion. Personally, I think it is wicked to neglect the body and deliberately to do things which will cause illness. It is not alone on the positive side that wickedness counts. It is equally wicked to neglect to do the things which will make for good health.

When it comes to eating, many persons are just as haphazard, careless, and indifferent as they can be. They seem to apply themselves to the problem of life just about as successfully as the absent-minded professor of whom I have heard.

Christmas was approaching, and he went out to make his purchases. Apparently he did keep in mind that Christmas is a holiday, but to the horror of his family when they opened his gifts on Christmas, they found an Easter lily, a package of April fool candy, and a bunch of fire crackers.

Lots of people are just as absent-minded regarding the things they take into their stomachs. Along with good food they take indigestible things and unneeded things, and entirely inappropriate things. Every parent should be so well informed regarding the essentials of health that the child will be receiving sensible instruction every day. Not alone in the home should this be the case, but in the school room. Right living should be one of the important subjects for study. The parent and the teacher have an opportunity to approach the gods by teaching health to the child.

The press has a wonderful opportunity. In these days the radio is being used for this purpose.

We are approaching the time when instruction will be so general, so universally received, that there can be no possible excuse for doing the things which are now done thoughtlessly and ignorantly. I look forward with pleasure to the time when doctors won't be needed except as a part of the teaching equipment of the community. The ideal state would be one where the only medical attention needed would be in the efforts made to avoid disease, rather than to treat it.

I trust that you will be inspired to obtain all the accurate health knowledge possible. Apply it to your own living and pass it on to your family and friends. We should make good health contagious, just as disease is contagious today.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.
SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 12.

Genius works in sport.
—Emerson.

Sunday's horoscope shows a propitious day for all literary and cultural activities, with particular success to those things relating to religion, or mystical unfoldment or advancement. It is good for writing letters.

Those whose birthday it is may expect an active year in affairs generally, but it will be particularly good for advancing literary interest, publishing and promotions. A child born on this day should be versatile and talented and should make a success of its life in several directions.

Notable Nativities: Charles Darwin, scientist and author.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 13.

Monday's astrological forecast shows contradictory conditions and possibly spectacular situations in business as well as personal relations. It is probable that there may be much turmoil, confusion and movement, which may bring desired effects if coolly managed. Safeguard employment.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of great commotion, with spectacular occurrences and lively conditions generally, which may be turned to advantage if cautiously and discreetly handled. But safeguard the employment, and the finances. A child born on this day may be many-sided as to talents and character, and may have a sensational career, in which the feminine forces may predominate or assist.

Notable Nativities: Charles Barnard, American dramatist.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

Negligees Constitute Today's Topic.

I HAVE been modeling a lot of negligees lately—filmy ones, heavy ones, tailored ones, dressy ones. Amid so many it's hard to make a selection.

I think my favorite lies midway between two extremes, the tailored model and the delicate bits of chiffon, trimmed with ostrich feathers and looking absolutely good for nothing but beauty—aesthetic, but not very substantial.

In Summer it is nice to think of such lightness, but when weather reports tell us that the mercury is nearing the zero mark it's more comforting to think of cozy folds and warm materials that one may snugle into.

I modeled one of that type for Mrs. James-Owen yesterday. She did not take it, but selected a robe of light crepe trimmed with marabou instead. I felt that she made a mistake, but, after all, each one to her taste.

The rejected negligee was made of heavy blue crepe-satin, which, by employing both sides of the material, effected an interesting combination. The dull side was used in the important body of the wrap, and the shiny side in a hem and a fold, which circled the hips. The cuffs were quilted rolls of the shiny side. The collar, continuing in a long fold down the front, had the same quilted motif except that it was fashioned of the dull side of the material.

As an innovation, we have added mules to our stock.

There are many lovely kinds; some in brocade materials, trimmed with rhinestones or feather pompoms and some fashioned of futuristic-looking patches of multicolored kid. With the elaborately embroidered Japanese kimonos which retain popularity throughout changing styles, we are selling a number of flat wooden sandals with leather straps (made pliable by elastic insets) over the instep. The newest models are being made with high heels, very interesting and very chic. They may be used as bedroom accessories or as bathing shoes when warm weather comes again.

HORRORS! Back again where she started! After all these weeks, yea, months of dieting, exercising and abstaining—this is the story the scale tells her! What a waste of effort, energy and good times! And before her rose a vision of the delicacies she had given up for a blasted illusion. Well, she was just meant to be plump. She would indulge her appetite and let the consequences be happy! But again a vision obtrudes itself and this time it is an array of exquisite gowns and wraps and coats of no uncertain silhouette. How can she wear all those lovely things with the scale indicating the sad news? She must make another effort and defeat the scale. Sightless, but Bravely Facing the World!

By WINIFRED BLACK

SHE'S going blind, the pretty little twenty-year-old girl.

Stone blind, and the doctors say they can't do a thing for her.

Within a year, so the physicians tell her, she won't be able to see a thing—not the face of her own mother, not the great tree that she has known since she was a little baby just learning to walk.

Not the house where she was born, not the familiar walls or any of the old furniture that has been a part of her life ever since she can remember.

The sun in his glory she will never see again, nor the moon in her beauty. The sky sprinkled thick with stars—this her eyes will never note again.

And what do you think she's doing about it? Sitting down and weeping? Not at all. She's packing her trunk to go to Europe. She's going to England and Ireland and Scotland, and from there she's going to Holland and to Germany and to France and to Italy, and every day her eyesight will get dimmer and dimmer.

But she's going to see something of this beautiful world first—all of it that she can manage.

Cathedrals, and old castles, and sleepy little Old World towns, and glorious mountains, and rushing streams, and strange narrow streets full of strange thronging people. The sea and the glory of it, the calm and the comfort of it, Amalfi, serene and untroubled by the blue

Mediterranean; Ravello, the tiny village made up of stairs and ancient palaces, with the towers of the Saracens standing below like huge sentinels.

The green fields of Ireland, the gray towns of England, the wild beauty of Scotland—all these she will bring home with her, and when the darkness has fallen, she can sit for hours—remember.

What a wise girl! How wise are they who encourage her in her plan.

That's all we're doing all our lives, anyhow, all of us—storing up things to remember. What a wonderful thing for this little Iowa school-teacher to do! What a lesson she's giving all of us in courage and in common sense! I wish the world were peopled with girls like her. We should have some kind of a race of human beings to look forward to, shouldn't we?

THE HOME KITCHEN

Some Famous Soups.

TRAVELERS tell home-bodies of the famous soups they meet on their travels among other desirable acquaintances. Let the home-bodies beat them to it, so to speak, and try the following recipes for their amusement. Follow the directions closely and after one making you will want to ask your neighbors in to taste the foreign visitor.

Cock-a-Leekie. (Scottish)

Clean, trim and slice one dozen large, fresh leeks, slicing in half-inch pieces. Dice a fresh carrot, cut a bunch of celery in half-inch pieces, and saute all together in a heaping tablespoonful of butter. Then add a cup of boiling water, a quart of warm milk, a tablespoonful of onion juice, a heaping tablespoonful of baking soda, a can of hot tomato sauce, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and a tablespoonful of diced raw carrot. Cook gently for twenty minutes.

Thicken with two tablespoonfuls of flour blended in a half cupful of milk.

Pea Soup. (Spain)

Heat a cupful of olive oil to boiling point, then add three cupfuls of freshly shelled green peas. Cook slowly until tender. Next add a pint of boiling water, a quart of warm milk, a tablespoonful of onion juice, a heaping tablespoonful of baking soda, a can of hot tomato sauce, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and a tablespoonful of diced raw carrot. Cook gently for twenty minutes.

Thicken with two tablespoonfuls of flour blended in a half cupful of milk.

Pea Soup. (French)

Put one and a half quarts of chicken broth that has had the grease removed into a saucepan and heat it hot. Blend together a cupful of milk, the yolks of three eggs, and one heaping tablespoonful of flour. Bring to boiling point, stirring continuously, and when thickened add gradually to the hot broth. Add pepper, salt, juice of an onion, then strain, reheat but do not cook any more, adding a tablespoonful each of boiled rice, diced cooked carrots, chopped parsley, asparagus tips, and green peas. Add when hot a quarter cupful of hot cream and serve.

Soup Surda. (Portugal)

Put into a kettle a quart of water, a cupful of bacon drippings, a tablespoonful of vinegar, a large cupful of chopped onions, a half of garlic, salt, pepper and a saltspoonful of saffron; cook until the onions are tender. Poach eggs and lay one on a bread round in each soup plate. After thickening the soup with a little cornstarch dissolved in water to the consistency of honey pour around the eggs in the plates and serve.

Risotto a la Milanese. (French)

Chop finely a medium sized Spanish onion and put into a saucepan with a heaping tablespoonful of butter. Saute until cooked and a delicate brownish color then add a quart of broth, and a cupful of washed large head rice. Cook gently until the rice is swelled and tender, season with pepper, salt and a few grains of sugar, a little nutmeg, a heaping tablespoonful of butter and a half cupful of grated cheese. Serve with toasted croutons.

Potage Rizotto. (Turkish)

Take two quarts of carefully made lamb broth, add a cupful each of washed rice and well soaked dried peas. Cook for one hour closely covered, then add a cupful of strained tomato sauce, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and season to taste. Cook until peas are soft, then serve with toast fingers and grated cheese.

The important points to be on the look out for in choosing a soup for the Spring are the following: color and color combinations, line, material, silhouette, and neckline.

MOLE HILLS OFTEN HUGE TO WOMEN

Trivialities Seem to Assume a Great Importance While Things of More Vital Interest Are Passed With Neglect.

By DR. LOUIS E. BISCH

IT IS a well-known fact that women allow themselves to become wrought up over trivialities.

Indeed, too many women center their interest upon relatively unimportant issues in life while letting vital matters go by the board.

I have known mothers who would not let their children attend a school entertainment because, in the one case, the little girl did not have the right colored hair ribbon to match her dress, and because, in the other case, the mother did not wish her child to appear in bare feet on the stage in the class exhibition dance.

All the while the little tots suffered, of course, and for no other reason than that the respective mothers could not overcome being sticklers for details which were really of no importance compared to the bigger facts involved.

Sometimes women will develop exceedingly strong dislikes toward each other because of some petty thing.

If a woman makes a disparaging remark about another woman's way of fixing her hair, or gives her a sly dig that she does not know how to make a good pie crust—well, that is enough.

The offender in question may possess the most sterling qualities that human nature can possibly develop. That cannot, however, counter-balance or wipe out the "insult," real or fancied, that has revealed its petty head.

Women invariably fuss over trifles about the house.

That is one reason why they find it difficult to keep servants and to have other women work for them.

I have heard women praise a cook, say she is the finest ever. Later, because said cook neglects to salt the soup sufficiently when madam had dinner guests, the cook's stock at once falls to less than nothing and she can count herself lucky if she is able, because of the blunder, to hold her job.

It is such attention to small details that often irritate men to women. If a man mentions some unimportant detail about a woman's dress, let us say that he says he never saw such an artistic bow before in all his life, the woman will immediately credit the man with deep insight, unusual powers of observation, and an artistic sense.

All this within the last few years. But the point is that a woman will be more pleased over attention to such a small detail than over praise bestowed upon the architecture of her home.

Men are somewhat to blame for women's absorption in trivial matters.

For centuries men have reserved for themselves the more vital interests of life.

They often have allowed women to become interested in things they did not care to be interested in themselves—left-over, one might say.

Only within the last few years have women found that there is just as much, if not more, fun in real estate values than there is in the fluctuating prices of meat and vegetables.

It broadens a woman to think about politics, international relations, scientific discoveries, etc., and not always to be concerned so much about small, insignificant matters in relation to the home budget, clothes, and the neighbor's children.

To be sure, a woman's attention to these affairs is necessary.

But a woman should not make them almost the end and aim of her life.

Let her attend to trivialities if she must. But let her broaden her outlook at one and the same time as much as possible.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

The Tale of Two Wee Little Spiders.

ONE bright beautiful sunny day two wee little spiders sat sunning themselves on a rose bush.

"Well, I think I shall go for a sail and try to light on some fine-looking gentleman's coat," said the larger Spider. "Someone who is expecting something good. Better come along with me. I'm making for the big white house across the meadows."

"No, sister," replied the Tiny Spider, with a shake of her tiny head. "I believe I'll go over across the fields and see who needs me most."

"The idea of such talk," growled a strange voice and a great big garden spider crawled over the leaves and looked at the two sister spiders. "I'd like to know what good you folks do anyway. Better be building a web like I have and begin catching your food."

"Oh, Mr. Garden Spider," squeaked Tiny Spider, "sister and I never build web houses like you and Mrs. Garden Spider do. We are going across the meadows to find someone and bring him luck."

"They'll have better luck if you stay away," growled Garden Spider as he crawled over the leaves and down to the ground.

"What are you going to stay here?" cried the larger Spider. "Well, you can if you wish. I'm going away."

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.
SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 12.

Genius works in sport.

—Emerson.

Sunday's horoscope shows a propitious day for all literary and cultural activities, with particular success to those things relating to religion, or mystical unfoldment or advancement. It is good for writing letters.

Those whose birthday it is may expect an active year in affairs generally, but it will be particularly good for advancing literary interest, publishing and promotions. A child born on this day should be versatile and talented and should make a success of its life in several directions.

Notable Nativities: Charles Darwin, scientist and author.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 13.

Monday's astrological forecast shows contradictory conditions and possibly spectacular situations in business as well as personal relations. It is probable that there may be much turmoil, confusion and movement, which may bring desired effects if coolly managed. Safeguard employment.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of great commotion, with spectacular occurrences and lively conditions generally, which may be turned to advantage if cautiously and discreetly handled. But safeguard the employment and the finances. A child born on this day may be many-sided as to talents and character, and may have a sensational career, in which the feminine forces may predominate or assist.

Notable Nativities: Charles Barnard, American dramatist.

Bad News

—:—

By Fanny Darrell

HORRORS! Back again where she started! After all these weeks, yea, months of dieting, exercising and abstaining—this is the story the scale tells her! What a waste of effort, energy and good times! And before her rose a vision of the delicacies she had given up for a blasted illusion. Well, she was just meant to be plump. She would indulge her appetite and let the consequences hang! But again a vision obtrudes itself and this time it is an array of exquisite gowns and wraps and coats of no uncertain silhouette. How can she wear all those lovely things with the scale indicating the sad news? She must make another effort and defeat the scale. Her two lovely children are as yet blissfully ignorant of the blow their beautiful young mama has experienced.

Sightless, but Bravely Facing the World!

By WINIFRED BLACK

SHE'S going blind, the pretty little twenty-year-old girl.

Stone blind, and the doctors say they can't do a thing for her.

Within a year, so the physicians tell her, she won't be able to see a thing—not the face of her own mother, not the great tree that she has known since she was a little baby just learning to walk.

Not the house where she was born, not the familiar walls or any of the old furniture that has been a part of her life ever since she can remember.

The sun in his glory she will never see again, nor the moon in her beauty. The sky sprinkled thick with stars—this her eyes will never note again.

And what do you think she's doing about it? Sitting down and weeping? Not at all. She's packing her trunk to go to Europe. She's going to England and Ireland and Scotland, and from there she's going to Holland and to Germany and to France and to Italy, and every day her eyesight will get dimmer and dimmer.

But she's going to see something of the world first—all of it that she can manage.

Cathedrals, and old castles, and sleepy little Old World towns, and glorious mountains, and rushing streams, and strange narrow streets full of strange thronging people. The sea and the glory of it, the earth and the comfort of it, Amalfi, serene and untroubled by the blue

Mediterranean; Ravello, the tiny village made up of stairs and ancient palaces, with the towers of the Saracens standing below like huge sentinels.

The green fields of Ireland, the wild beauty of Scotland—all these she will bring home with her, and when the darkness has fallen, she can sit for hours and remember.

What a wise girl! How wise are they who encourage her in her plan.

That's all we're doing all our lives, anyhow, all of us—storing up things to remember. What a wonderful thing for this little Iowa school-teacher to do! What a lesson she's giving all of us in courage and in common sense! I wish the world were peopled with girls like her. We should have some kind of a race of human beings to look forward to, shouldn't we?

MOLE HILLS OFTEN HUGE TO WOMEN

Trivialities Seem to Assume a Great Importance While Things of More Vital Interest Are Passed With Neglect.

By DR. LOUIS E. BISCH

IT is a well-known fact that women allow themselves to become wrought up over trivialities.

Indeed, too many women center their interest upon relatively unimportant issues in life while letting vital matters go by the board.

I have known mothers who would not let their children attend a school entertainment because, in the one case, the little girl did not have the right colored hair ribbon to match her dress, and because, in the other case, the mother did not wish her child to appear in bare feet on the stage in the class exhibition dance.

All the while the little tots suffered, of course, and for no other reason than that the respective mothers could not overcome being sticklers for details which were really of no importance compared to the bigger facts involved.

Sometimes women will develop exceedingly strong dislikes toward each other because of some petty thing.

If a woman makes a disparaging remark about another woman's way of fixing her hair, or gives her a sly dig that she does not know how to make a good pie crust—well, that is enough.

The offender in question may possess the most sterling qualities that human nature can possibly develop.

That cannot, however, counter-balance or wipe out the "insult," real or fancied, that has revealed its petty head.

Women invariably fuss over trifles about the house.

That is one reason why they find it difficult to keep servants and to have other women work for them.

I have heard women praise a cook, say she is the finest ever. Later, because said cook neglects to salt the soup sufficiently when madam had dinner guests, the cook's stock at once falls to less than nothing and she can count herself lucky if she is able, because of the blunder, to hold her job.

It is such attention to small details that often ingratiate men to women.

If a man mentions some unimportant detail about a woman's dress, let us say that he says he never saw such an artistic bow before in all his life, the woman will immediately credit the man with deep insight, unusual powers of observation, and an artistic sense.

All this may be true, of course. But the point is that a woman will be more pleased over attention to such a small detail than over praise bestowed upon the architecture of her home.

Men are somewhat to blame for women's absorption in trivial matters.

For centuries men have reserved for themselves the more vital interests of life.

They often have allowed women to become interested in things they themselves—left over, one might say.

Only within the last few years have women found that there is just as much, if not more, fun in real estate values than there is in the fluctuating prices of meat and vegetables.

It broadens a woman to think about politics, international relations, scientific discoveries, etc., and not always to be concerned so much about the home budget, clothes, and the neighbor's children.

To be sure, a woman's attention to these affairs is necessary.

But a woman should not make them almost the end and aim of her life.

Let her attend to trivialities if she must. But let her broaden her outlook at one and the same time as much as possible.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

The Tale of Two Wee Little Spiders.

ONE bright beautiful sunny day two wee little spiders sat sunning themselves on a rose bush.

"Well, I think I shall go for a sail and try to light on some fine-looking gentleman's coat," said the larger Spider, "someone who is expecting something good. Better come along with me. I'm making for the big white house across the meadows."

"No, sister," replied the Tiny Spider, "with a shake of her tiny head, 'I believe I'll go over across the fields and see who needs me most.'"

"The idea of such talk," growled a strange voice and a great big garden spider crawled over the leaves and looked at the two sister spiders.

"I'd like to know what good you folks do anyway," he said. "Better be building a web like I have and begin catching your food for the day."

"Oh, Mr. Garden Spider," squeaked Tiny Spider, "sister and I never build web houses like you and Mrs. Garden Spider do. We are going across the meadows to find someone and bring him luck."

"They'll have better luck if you stay away," growled the big Spider as he crawled over the leaves and down to the ground.

"I'm for some wealthy fellow's coat," chuckled the larger of the sisters, and she tilted her head on the tip of the rose-branch, threw out her silken thread and jumped off in the air. The hot waves carried her on and on. When Tiny Spider couldn't see her any more, she threw out her tiny web thread and sailed away.

She met her sister at the gate of an old tumbled-down hut.

"Why are you going to stay here?" cried the larger Spider.

BIBLE THOUGHT

OUR GOD IS GREAT—Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised; and his greatness is unsearchable.—Psalm 145:2.

PRAYER—The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice.

Lindy's Nerve.

Col. Lindbergh is reported to have been greatly amused by the reports to the effect that he was threatened with a nervous breakdown.

If Lindy was built of ordinary human clay, he would have broken down long before this. One might say that he would never have been able to make that solitary journey across the Atlantic ocean. And the strain of big ceremonial dinners, of meeting crowds and reception committees, would have cracked the nervous fabric of 99 out of 100 of our every day people.

Somehow this fellow has attained a higher poise than the rest of us, and he comes about as near being a superman as anyone we have produced of late. But there must be a limit. Somewhere the point comes when the strongest constitution begins to break. People never know where that point is until they discover it by hard experience. One can well hope that so supremely useful a man will not experiment too far with his limit of endurance.

Keeping the Industries Busy.

Leading men in the business world say that the industries of the country are equipped to produce far more goods than their market calls for. How can all this vast producing equipment be kept busy?

Many industries are forced to run irregularly by fluctuating demands. Styles change so frequently in many lines, that producers do not dare to make up goods ahead of orders. And people will not anticipate their wants so as to tide over dull times.

If our people lived the simple and thrifty life, if they bought standard goods so that the mills knew what they could depend upon, if they would foresee their wants and buy ahead of their needs in return for reasonable concessions of prices, then most of the unemployment would cease and the factories would keep running.

Houston Isn't So Hot.

Mayor Holcombe of Houston, Tex., was not loath to tell New Yorkers, on his recent visit to Manhattan, of the advantages of Houston as a summer convention city.

He pointed out that Houston's climate is cool and mild; that sea breezes from the not distant gulf temper the heat of the Texas sun; that the city is distinguished for its architecture and the number of its fine shade trees, and that the main thoroughfare, 100 feet wide, has along the curb giant oak trees that touch overhead.

The mayor added, "with a touch of embarrassment," according to a New York paper, that this thoroughfare was named "Main street."

New York, of course would be ready to smile superciliously at that. Yet the good mayor needn't have blushed. Main street is an American tradition. And why not? If a certain street is your main street, why not name it so and be done?

The Charm of Banditry.

There died in Italy the other day a 93-year-old patriarch who rejoiced in the title of "the last of the Italian brigands." During his life-time he had been credited with more than 30 murders, and in his youth he was known as "the wolf of the Sila."

It is rather odd, when you stop to think of it, how such a man can always hold out interest. Notorious bandits seem to exercise a great fascination for all of us biographers of such men as Jesse James, for instance, are selling like hot cakes all over America. Why is it? Is it because we are so hedged about with rules and regulations that we have a sneaking admiration for a man who defies all law? It would make an interesting study for a psychologist.

"If it weren't for automobiles the American farmers wouldn't be where they are," says a current advertisement, and it might be truthfully added that the same thing applies to pedestrians.—Zanesville O., Signal.

The RAMBLER

By NORMAN W. RALSTON

THE DAY IS DONE

THE day is Done
The ghosts
Of Time
Go marching by
My bed,
And every little
Petty crime
Comes up, though
They were dead;
I see the deeds I
Should have Done,
And those quite Poorly worked,
And cloudy skies
Obscuring
Sun
Because my life
I shirked;
These ghosts go
Marching by
My bed,
A sneer on every
Face,
And I, half-wishing
I were dead,
To free me of Disgrace—
And so the world
Moves on,
I've found,
Omitting those who Fail,
The loser grovels
In the ground—
His soul is in a Jail—

And what we mean to say
Is,
When day is done review
Your past
And see what you have Done,
And if you shirk,
Resolve at last
That each new rising
Sun
Will find you reaching
Out for life
With never pest and vim,
So when a ghost comes
'Round in strife
You'll simply laugh
At him.

What this world needs is people who don't always talk about the rotten weather we seem to have at times.

AN IMPRESSION OF LONDON TOWN

ANON. sends in some reflections of a tour in old London. All about flowers, and why not? The thorns of life are made beautiful by a rose. Anon. writes to me: One of the traveler's first impressions when touring England is the universal love of flowers. Every cottage has its flower garden. Every window its flower box, radiant with color. One of the most interesting places in London is Covent Garden flower market. Half a city square given over to the sale of flowers. Every bloom known to England can be found there at one time or another. Flower vendors buy supplies every morning for that day's business. All over London these vendors are to be seen crying their sale. Many of these people are very poor indeed, victims of the drink habit. These beautiful flowers—God's most cheering gift to man—are often seen in strange company. One is astonished to see people as poor as the vendors stop to pay a penny or two for their favorite flower. There may be a spiritual uplift in carrying and looking upon a beautiful flower. Who knows?

Who knows the magic power
That lies within the petals of a flower?

OLD BILL

Out on the commons one sultry day,
An old man led his horse away;
"Hello, old feller," said a passerby,
"Takin' old bones out to the plains to die?"

A look of sadness on the old man's face was seen:

"Im taking my old friend for a bit of green."
"Say! I'd take him to the bone yard if he were mine,
From the looks of him it's surely time."

"Would you?" the old man said with trembling voice,
"Would you destroy a dear old friend from selfish choice?"

He's helped our bread to earn these twenty years—
The old man's eyes were filled with tears.

"Sir, we've worked the farm, we've gone to mill,
And he carries us to meetin' still,
Do you think I'd raise my hand to kill
So dear a friend as our Old Bill?"

"I'll do by him as I'd be done by—
Like a Christian I will want to die—
And if Old Bill could talk, I know he'd say:
'Master, I want to die the self-same way.'"

"Beg pardon, sir, there's a difference," the passer said,

"In people you meet from day to day."

"Yes, and in horses," the old man replies,

"I'll keep Old Bill 'till one or t'other dies."

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescout, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, recidivist, her worldly value, barters her to Ravoire, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Manon's brother steals her for Ravoire. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoire. Fabien, thinking her perfidious, returns to his studies. But Manon seeks him, explains, and they go to Paris again, where they live in dreamlike splendor. Then creditors besiege them.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued
"No? But it is pleasant even if one does not plan ahead to indulge." Spurred on by the bailiffs' surprise and anger, Fabien was having a delightful time. Returning the snuff box to his pocket with apparent regret, he continued, "Perhaps a sip of wine would be more to your liking." Without waiting for a reply he filled three glasses from a ewer on the table. "Help yourselves, gentlemen—to your very good health—and future success!" Fabien raised his glass and waited, but not for more than a second. The men's red faces indicated too plainly that they never refused a drink.
After the rich red wine had passed their throats it seemed to wash away the anger and the hateful words that had been struggling for utterance.
"Monsieur, we are sorry that it is our unpleasant duty to be insistent, but your creditors are very pressing and we must have money today."

At last it was out, mellowed perhaps by wine, although no less

"70% could make money at the card tables—if you would."

true and foreboding to the horrible consequences if the demands were not met.
"I have told the creditors that I will pay them next week," Fabien succeeded in making his voice stern and final.

"Yes, you have told them that every day for weeks! We will not leave here without the money," snorted the other bailiff angrily.
The furnishings in this house were of a considerable amount. The other continued speculatively as he appraised the valuable tapestries, the rich hangings and rare ornaments in the room.

Fabien understood their intentions and squirmed uneasily. How terrible for Manon if the furnishings she loved were moved out to meet creditor's demands. For a moment he thought desperately about how he could get rid of the collectors; then a smile spread over his face and he said to the bailiffs: "Your expression reminds me—as Richelieu said to Madame du Barry just as she was about to—if you have heard this priceless story, stop me—do Barry was on the point of—"

With a friendly hand on each man's shoulder Fabien lowered his voice and continued the point of his story as he craftily guided them toward the door without their realizing what was happening.

Fortunately they enjoyed a rare bit of gossip as much as a glass of rare wine. Deeply absorbed in the scandal they were oblivious to their surroundings until they found themselves in the open entrance of the house. Immediately they recalled their duty and began noisy protestations.

"Next week," Fabien said with a disarmingly smile, "word of honor," and closed the door in their faces.

It was a narrow escape and good riddance. However, Fabien was worried because that sort of thing could not continue indefinitely. His credit was exhausted and he had postponed payments so many times that it would not be done again. It would have been comforting to share the worry with Manon, and although Fabien longed for her sympathy, he had sworn never to make her practice economy; he must handle the matter alone. His air of carefree gallantry vanished with the departing bailiffs.

Colorado To Ask U. S. To Get Rid of I. W. W.

DENVER, Feb. 11.—(INS)—Deportation from the United States of members of the Industrial Workers of the world will be asked of congress by Charles M. White, member of the Denver district attorney's office and a captain in the Colorado National Guard.

Captain White will appear before the house committee on immigration early as representative of the Colorado National Guard to tell members of the committee of this state's costly experience with Dejectedly entering the library, he began sorting over great sheafs of unpaid and long overdue bills. Among them were a number of extravagant ones incurred by Lescout. It was an imposition. Aside from his income, Lescout had gleaned enough from the gaming tables to live in luxury, but he spent enormous sums indulging his various appetites and a big amount was hoarded away for an indolent old ago. Lescout was crafty.

After the inhuman way he had treated his sister neither she nor Fabien had any desire for his society. But unfortunately the house they leased was in the very neighborhood selected by Lescout, after the Comte ousted him following Manon's unceremonious departure. One day he chanced to see Manon leave her carriage. Immediately he followed her into the house and not many hours elapsed before he established himself in their midst.

Lescout was rude and without the slightest principle of honor, so it meant nothing to him that his presence was undesirable. He was determined upon a friendly relationship, because it meant a reduction in personal expenses. By preference he was a card sharp and a gambler, but recently his hand had grown unsteady so that good fortune was as fickle and elusive as luck. Money became the most desirable of all possible possessions and he took all he could get whenever possible. As long as Fabien could provide handsomely, after the manner of the Comte, Manon's choice of lovers was agreeable to her unscrupulous brother.

Lescout sauntered into the library while Fabien was pondering over finances. Having secretly been through the bills himself, merely as a matter of curiosity, he knew that matters were painfully pressing.

"What are you going to do about it?" he inquired.

"What is there to do?" Fabien shook his head hopelessly and looked into space. He had promised the bailiffs that money would be forthcoming on the following week, but there was no more chance of having it then than there was of seeing it appear on the desk before his very eyes in the next five minutes. One was exactly as hopeless or possible as the other.

Lescout shrugged his shoulders. There was something that could be done if Fabien would agree. Picking up a deck of cards from the table, his expert fingers casually divided the pack and shuffled them quicker than the eye could follow. "You are clever enough to make your living at cards," he remarked as he again shuffled in mid-air. "Once you learn the tricks of the trade, it is simple."

"Never!" With a fleeting expression of horror Fabien shook his head decisively.

"Then why not retrench?" Again Lescout shrugged and continued shuffling the cards directly in front of Fabien. "Cut down expenses—get yourselves a farm in the country and a nice little plow—Manon would like that!" He laughed tauntingly.

"If I am not able to supply Manon with the luxuries she loves I deserve to lose her."

"You could make money at the card tables—if you would," the gambler temptingly stated a fact.

"Gleaning at cards is out of the question—for a gentleman, and was born that. My ancestors were honorable men."

Fabien was proud.
"Mine were not, thank God!" returned Lescout heartily. "I inherited pluck, not scruples." Lescout continued as Fabien stared gloomily out the window. "Take a man with millions, and there are many of them in Paris, does he mind losing a hundred louis? Not And isn't a hundred louis better for being in circulation? It's only justice!"

This was more philosophical than anything Lescout had said before. Fabien looked at him in amused interest. Conscious of his attention, Lescout calmly shot an ace out of his sleeve. Fabien watched with a fascinated interest that was not lost on the trickster. Again Lescout manipulated the aces.

"Ah!" exclaimed Fabien admiringly.

"Do you want to try?" Lescout offered the cards.

"You flatter me—I am not that clever—but as a matter of curiosity I will see if my fingers are as quick as yours." Fabien accepted the cards.

Both men stared in amazement as Fabien dealt an ace from his sleeve with as much adroitness as his teacher had displayed.
"A bit of luck, that!" "You can't do it again," came from Lescout.
The first glow of success went to Fabien's head and he was annoyed at having Lescout steal the glamour by terming it "luck." Just to prove that he had mastered the trick, Fabien shot two cards from his sleeve in quick succession. He was very pleased with himself.

DELAYING THE ORDEAL AS LONG AS POSSIBLE

The Epic of the Air "WE" By Charles A. Lindbergh

CHAPTER XXX.

When the first few arrived, I attempted to get them to hold the rest of the crowd back, away from the plane, but apparently no one could understand, or would have been able to conform to my request if he had.

I cut the switch to keep the propeller from killing some one, and attempted to organize an impromptu guard for the plane. The impossibility of any immediate organization became apparent and when parts of the ship began to crack from the pressure of the multitude I decided to climb out of the cockpit in order to draw the crowd away.

Speaking was impossible; no words could be heard in the uproar and nobody apparently cared to hear any. I started to climb out of the cockpit, but as soon as one foot appeared through the door I was dragged the rest of way without assistance on my part.

For nearly half an hour I was unable to touch the ground, during which time I was ardently carried around in what seemed to be a very small area, and in every position it is possible to be in. Every one had the best of intentions but no one seemed to know just what they were.

The French military flyers very resourcefully took the situation in hand. A number of them mingled with the crowd; then, at a given signal, they placed my helmet on an American correspondent and cried: "Here is Lindbergh." That helmet on an American was sufficient evidence. The correspondent immediately became the center of attraction, and while he was being taken protestingly to the Reception commission via a rather devious route, I managed to get inside one of the hangars.

Meanwhile a second group of soldiers and police had surrounded the plane and soon placed it out of danger in another hangar.

The French ability to handle an unusual situation with speed and capability was remarkably demonstrated that night at Le Bourget.

Ambassador Herick extended me an invitation to remain at his embassy while I was in Paris, which I gladly accepted. But grateful as I was at the time, it did not take me long to realize that a kind Providence had placed me in Ambassador Herick's hands. The ensuing days found me in situations that I had certainly never expected to be in and in which I relied on Ambassador Herick's sympathetic aid.

These situations were brought about by the whole-herated welcome to me—an American—that touched me beyond any point that any words can express.

I left France with a debt of gratitude which, though I cannot repay it, I shall always remember. If the French people had been acclaiming their own gallant airmen, Nungesser and Coli who were lost only after fearlessly departing in the face of conditions insurmountably greater than those that confronted me, their enthusiastic welcome and graciousness could not have been greater.

In Belgium as well, I was received with a warmth which reflected more than simply a passing curiosity in a trans-Atlantic flight) but which was rather a demonstration by the people of their interest in a new means of transportation which eventually would bring still closer together the new world and the old. Their welcome, too, will be a cherished memory for all time.

In England, I experienced one final unforgettable demonstration of friendship for an American. That spontaneous wonderful re-ception during my brief visit seemed typical of what I had always heard of the good sportsmanship of the English.

My words to all those friends in Europe are inadequate, but my feelings of appreciation are boundless.

CONCLUSION

When I was contemplating the flight to Paris I looked forward to making a short tour of Europe with especial regard to the various airports and aeronautical activities.

After I arrived, however, the necessity of returning to America in the near future became apparent and, after a consultation with Ambassador Houghton, who informed me that President Coolidge was sending the cruiser Memphis to Cherbourg for my return journey to America, I flew the "Spirit of St. Louis" to Gosport early one morning. There it was dismantled and crated, through the courtesy of the Royal Air Force which also placed a Woodcock pursuit plane at my disposal.

I returned to London in the Woodcock and a few days later flew to Paris in another R. A. F. machine of the same type.

I remained overnight in Paris, and early the next morning flew a French Breguet to Cherbourg, where the cruiser Memphis was waiting.

Admiral Burrage met me at the dock, and after going aboard the Memphis I became acquainted with Captain Lackey and the officers of the ship. During the trip across they extended every courtesy and did everything within their power to make the voyage a pleasant one.

A description of my welcome back to the United States would, in itself be sufficient to fill a larger volume than this. I am not an author by profession, and my pen could never express the gratitude which I feel towards the American people.

The voyage up the Potomac and to the Government Grounds in Washington; up the Hudson River and along Broadway; over the Mississippi and to St. Louis to do justice to these occasions would require a far greater writer than myself.

Washington, New York and finally St. Louis and home. Each of these cities has left me with an impression that I shall never forget, and a debt of gratitude which I can never repay.

Former President Said There Are Enough Holidays, So Give Sunday to God.

Theodore Roosevelt says, "There are enough holidays for most of us. Sunday differs from other holidays in the fact that there are fifty-two of them every year. Therefore, on Sundays go to Church."

"Yes, I know all the excuses. I know that one can worship the Creator in a grove of trees, or by a running brook, or in a man's own house just as well as in a church. But I also know as a matter of cold facts the average man does not thus worship or thus dedicate himself! If he stays away from the church he does not spend his time in good works or in lofty meditation."

Noted Critic Pays Tribute to "The Way of All Flesh," Coming to City.

The world's greatest character actor in the most painstakingly perfect characterization of his life.

The soft lights in the studio projection room flashed on like a mechanical dawn following the final fadeout on the screen; for a few poignant seconds there had been absolute silence.

Then the voice again in the half light; a whisper like an echo: "A perfect performance."

The tribute came from a nationally known motion picture critic; a man who has seen more films—good, bad, and impossible, than any other person connected with the industry. It was made in the laboratory projection room of Paramount's West Coast Studio.

The critic had just witnessed a preview of "The Way of All Flesh," in which Emil Jannings, the supreme international film artist, makes his American debut.

This wonder picture, acclaimed everywhere as one of the finest films of the year will be shown at the Metropolitan theater Monday.

Belle Bennett, the star of "Stella Dallas" and Phyllis Haver, who made fame and fortune for herself in "What Price Glory" head the supporting cast. "The Way of All Flesh" was directed by Victor Fleming, produced of "The Rough Riders." Donald Keith and Fred Kohler play important parts.

It is worthy of note that Lady Brownlow, formerly Miss Kitty Kinloch is a member of the Davenport family; also that Mrs. Richard Norton, another of London's beautiful women, belongs to the Davenport line.

Seek New List Of Beauties of World

LONDON, Feb. 11—(UP) —Comeliness experts here are once more trying to solve the problem as to who are the world's most beautiful women.

One gives the following three as topping the lists for all time: Queen Nefertiti, the Egyptian; Mono Lisa; and Mrs. Davenport (as portrayed by Romney).

Another expert is of the opinion that the three most beautiful women of modern times are: Viscountess Curzon; Lady Nunburnholme, and Lady Brownlow.

It is worthy of note that Lady Brownlow, formerly Miss Kitty Kinloch is a member of the Davenport family; also that Mrs. Richard Norton, another of London's beautiful women, belongs to the Davenport line.

BIBLE THOUGHT

OUR GOD IS GREAT—Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised; and his greatness is unsearchable.—Psalm 145:2.

PRAYER—The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice.

Lindy's Nerve.

Col. Lindbergh is reported to have been greatly amused by the reports to the effect that he was threatened with a nervous breakdown.

If Lindy was built of ordinary human clay, he would have broken down long before this. One might say that he would never have been able to make that solitary journey across the Atlantic ocean. And the strain of big ceremonial dinners, of meeting crowds and reception committees, would have cracked the nervous fabric of 99 out of 100 of our every day people.

Somehow this fellow has attained a higher poise than the rest of us, and he comes about as near being a superman as anyone we have produced of late. But there must be a limit. Somewhere the point comes when the strongest constitution begins to break. People never know where that point is until they discover it by hard experience. One can well hope that so supremely useful a man will not experiment too far with his limit of endurance.

Keeping the Industries Busy.

Leading men in the business world say that the industries of the country are equipped to produce far more goods than their market calls for. How can all this vast producing equipment be kept busy?

Many industries are forced to run irregularly by fluctuating demands. Styles change so frequently in many lines, that producers do not dare to make up goods ahead of orders. And people will not anticipate their wants so as to tide over dull times.

If our people lived the simple and thrifty life, if they bought standard goods so that the mills knew what they could depend upon, if they would foresee their wants and buy ahead of their needs in return for reasonable concessions of prices, then most of the unemployment would cease and the factories would keep running.

Houston Isn't So Hot.

Mayor Holcombe of Houston, Tex., was not loath to tell New Yorkers, on his recent visit to Manhattan, of the advantages of Houston as a summer convention city.

He pointed out that Houston's climate is cool and mild; that sea breezes from the not distant gulf temper the heat of the Texas sun; that the city is distinguished for its architecture and the number of its fine shade trees, and that the main thoroughfare, 100 feet wide, has along the curb giant oak trees that touch overhead.

The mayor added, "with a touch of embarrassment," according to a New York paper, that this thoroughfare was named "Main street."

New York, of course would be ready to smile superciliously at that. Yet the good mayor needn't have blushed. Main street is an American tradition. And why not? If a certain street is your main street, why not name it so and be done?

The Charm of Banditry.

There died in Italy the other day a 93-year-old patriarch who rejoiced in the title of "the last of the Italian brigands." During his life-time he had been credited with more than 30 murders, and in his youth he was known as "the wolf of the Sila."

It is rather odd, when you stop to think of it, how such a man can always hold out interest. Notorious bandits seem to exercise a great fascination for all of us; biographies of such men as Jesse James, for instance, are selling like hot cakes all over America.

Why is it? Is it because we are so hedged about with rules and regulations that we have a sneaking admiration for a man who defies all law? It would make an interesting study for a psychologist.

"If it weren't for automobiles the American farmers wouldn't be where they are," says a current advertisement, and it might be truthfully added that the same thing applies to pedestrians.—Zanesville O., Signal.

A criminal career seems to be fairly safe if you use good judgment in picking your alienists.—Delaware, O., Gazette.

The four creatures that provided the sweetie's clothes were a worm, a rat, a calf and a sucker.—Youngstown, O., Vindicator.

The RAMBLER

THE DAY IS DONE

THE day is Done
The ghosts Of Time
Go marching by
My bed,
And every little Petty crime
Comes up, though They were dead;
I see the deeds I Should have Done,
And those quite Poorly worked,
And cloudy skies Obscuring Sun
Because my life I shirked;
These ghosts go Marching by
My bed,
A sneer on every Face,
And I, half-wishing I were dead,
To free me of Disgrace—
And so the world Moves on,
I've found,
Omitting those who Fail,
The loser grovels In the ground—
His soul is in a Jail—

And what we mean to say Is,
When day is done review Your past
And see what you have Done,
And if you shirk, Resolve at last
That each new rising Sun Will find you reaching Out for life
With never pest and vim,
So when a ghost comes 'Round in strife You'll simply laugh At him.

What this world needs is people who don't always talk about the rotten weather we seem to have at times.

AN IMPRESSION OF LONDON TOWN

ANON. sends in some reflections of a tour in old London. All about flowers, and why not? The thorns of life are made beautiful by a rose. Anon. writes to me: One of the traveler's first impressions when touring England is the universal love of flowers. Every cottage has its flower garden. Every window its flower box, radiant with color. One of the most interesting places in London is Covent Garden flower market. Half a city square given over to the sale of flowers. Every bloom known to England can be found there at one time or another. Flower vendors buy supplies every morning for that day's business. All over London these vendors are to be seen crying their sale. Many of these people are very poor indeed, victims of the drink habit. These beautiful flowers—God's most cheering gift to man—are often seen in strange company. One is astonished to see people as poor as the vendors stop to pay a penny or two for their favorite flower. There may be a spiritual uplift in carrying and looking upon a beautiful flower. Who knows?

Who knows the magic power
That lies within the petals of a flower?

OLD BILL

Out on the commons one suitary gay,
An old man led his horse away;
"Hello, old feller," said a passerby,
"Takin' old bones out to the plains to die?"

A look of sadness on the old man's face was seen:
"I'm taking my old friend for a bit of green."
"Say! I'd take him to the bone yard if he were mine,
From the looks of him it's surely true."

"Would you?" the old man said with trembling voice,
"Would you destroy a dear old friend from selfish choice?"
He's helped our bread to earn these twenty years—
The old man's eyes were filled with tears.

"Sir, we've worked the farm, we've gone to mill,
And he carries us to meetin' still,
Do you think I'd raise my hand to kill
So dear a friend as our Old Bill?"

"I'll do by him as I'd be done by—
Like a Christian I will want to die—
And if Old Bill could talk, I know he'd say:
'Master, I want to die the self-same way.'"

"Beg pardon, sir, there's a difference," the passer said,
"In people you meet from day to day."
"Yes, and in horses," the old man replies,
"I'll keep Old Bill 'till one or 't'other dies."

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescout, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, Raoul, whose worldly value, barbers her to Raviro, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Manon's brother steals her for Raviro. Circumstances force her to surrender to Raviro. Fabien, thinking her perfidious, returns to his studies. But Manon seeks him, explains, and they go to Paris again, where they live in dreamlike splendor. Then creditors beset them.

"No? But it is pleasant even if one does not plan ahead to indulge." Spurred on by the bailliffs' surprise and anger, Fabien was having a delightful time. Returning the snuff box to his pocket with apparent regret, he continued, "Perhaps a sip of wine would be more to your liking?" Without waiting for a reply he filled three glasses from a ewer on the table. "Help yourselves, gentlemen—to your very good health—and future success!" Fabien raised his glass and waited, but not for more than a second. The men's red faces indicated too plainly that they never refused a drink.
After the rich red wine had passed their throats it seemed to wash away the anger and the hateful words that had been struggling for utterance.
"Monsieur, we are sorry that it is our unpleasant duty to be insistent, but your creditors are very pressing and we must have money today."
At last it was out, mellowed perhaps by wine, although no less

"What are you going to do about it?" he inquired.
"What is there to do?" Fabien shook his head hopelessly and looked into space. He had promised the bailliffs that money would be forthcoming on the following week, but there was no more chance of having it then than there was of seeing it appear on the desk before his very eyes in the next five minutes. One was exactly as hopeless or possible as the other.
Lescout shrugged his shoulders. There was something that could be done if Fabien would agree. Picking up a deck of cards from the table, his expert fingers casually divided the pack and shuffled them quicker than the eye could follow.
"You are clever enough to make your living at cards," he remarked as he again shuffled in mid-air. "Once you learn the tricks of the trade, it is simple."
"Never!" With a feeble expression of horror Fabien shook his head decisively.
"Then why not retrench?" Again Lescout shrugged and continued shuffling the cards directly in front of Fabien. "Cut down expenses—get yourselves a farm in the country and a nice little plow—Manon would like that!" He laughed tauntingly.

"If I am not able to supply Manon with the luxuries she loves I deserve to lose her."
"You could if you would," the gambler temptingly stated a fact.
"Cheating at cards is out of the question—for a gentleman, and I was born that. My ancestors were honorable men."
Fabien was proud.
"Fine were not, thank God!" returned Lescout heartily. "I inherited luck, not scruples." Lescout continued as Fabien stared gloomily out the window. "Take a man with millions, and there are many of them in Paris, does he mind losing a hundred louis? No! And isn't a hundred louis better for being in circulation? It's only justice!"

"This was more philosophical than anything Lescout had said before. Fabien looked at him in amused interest. Conscious of his attention, Lescout calmly shot an ace out of his sleeve. Fabien watched with a fascinated interest that was not lost on the trickster. Again Lescout manipulated the aces.
"Ah!" exclaimed Fabien admiringly.
"You want to try?" Lescout offered the cards.
"You datter me—I am not that clever—but as a matter of curiosity I will see if my fingers are as quick as yours." Fabien accepted the cards.
Both men stared in amazement as Fabien dealt an ace from his sleeve with as much skillfulness as his teacher had displayed.
"A bit of luck, that! You can't do it again," came from Lescout.
The first slow of success went to Fabien's head and he was annoyed at having Lescout steal the glamour by terming it "luck." Just to prove that he had mastered the trick, Fabien shot two cards from his sleeve in quick succession. He was very pleased with himself.

DELAYING THE ORDEAL AS LONG AS POSSIBLE

The Epic of the Air "WE" By Charles A. Lindbergh

CHAPTER XXX.

When the first few arrived, I attempted to get them to hold the rest of the crowd back, away from the plane, but apparently no one could understand, or would have been able to conform to my request if he had.

I cut the switch to keep the propeller from killing some one, and attempted to organize an impromptu guard for the plane. The impossibility of any immediate organization became apparent and when parts of the ship began to crack from the pressure of the multitude I decided to climb out of the cockpit in order to draw the crowd away.

Speaking was impossible; no words could be heard in the uproar and nobody apparently cared to hear any. I started to climb out of the cockpit, but as soon as one foot appeared through the door I was dragged the rest of way without assistance on my part.

For nearly half an hour I was unable to touch the ground, during which time I was ardently carried around in what seemed to be a very small area, and in every position it is possible to be in. Every one had the best of intentions but no one seemed to know just what they were.

The French military flyers very resourcefully took the situation in hand. A number of them mingled with the crowd; then, at a given signal, they placed my helmet on an American correspondent and cried: "Here is Lindbergh." That helmet on an American was sufficient evidence. The correspondent immediately became the center of attraction, and while he was being taken protestingly to the Reception committee via a rather devious route, I managed to get inside one of the hangars.

Meanwhile a second group of soldiers and police had surrounded the plane and soon placed it out of danger in another hangar. The French ability to handle an unusual situation with speed and capability was remarkably demonstrated that night at Le Bourget.

Ambassador Herrick extended me an invitation to remain at his embassy while I was in Paris, which I gladly accepted. But grateful as I was at the time, it did not take me long to realize that a kind Providence had placed me in Ambassador Herrick's hands. The ensuing days found me in situations that I had certainly never expected to be in and in which I relied on Ambassador Herrick's sympathetic aid.

These situations were brought about by the whole-herated welcome to me—an American—that touched me beyond any point that any words can express.

I left France with a debt of gratitude which, though I cannot repay it, I shall always remember. If the French people had been acclaiming their own gallant airmen, Nungesser and Coli who were lost only after fearlessly departing in the face of conditions insurmountably greater than those that confronted me, their enthusiastic welcome and graciousness could not have been greater.

In Belgium as well, I was received with a warmth which reflected more than simply a passing curiosity in a trans-Atlantic flight, but which was rather a demonstration by the people of their interest in a new means of transportation which eventually would bring still closer together the new world and the old. Their welcome, too, will be a cherished memory for all time.

In England, I experienced one final unforgettable demonstration of friendship for an American. That spontaneous wonderful reception during my brief visit seemed typical of what I had always heard of the good sportsmanship of the English.

My words to all those friends in Europe are inadequate, but my feelings of appreciation are boundless.

CONCLUSION

When I was contemplating the flight to Paris I looked forward to making a short tour of Europe with special regard to the various airports and aeronautical activities.

After I arrived, however, the necessity of returning to America in the near future became apparent and, after a consultation with Ambassador Houghton, who informed me that President Coolidge was sending the cruiser Memphis to Cherbourg for my return journey to America, I flew the "Spirit of St. Louis" to Gosport early one morning. There it was dismantled and crated, through the courtesy of the Royal Air Force which also placed a Woodcock pursuit plane at my disposal.

I returned to London in the Woodcock and a few days later flew to Paris in another R. A. F. machine of the same type.

I remained overnight in Paris, and early the next morning flew a French Breguet to Cherbourg, where the cruiser Memphis was waiting.

Admiral Burrage met me at the dock, and after going aboard the Memphis I became acquainted with Captain Lackey and the officers of the ship. During the trip across they extended every courtesy and did everything within their power to make the voyage a pleasant one.

A description of my welcome back to the United States would, in itself be sufficient to fill a larger volume than this. I am not an author by profession, and my pen could never express the gratitude which I feel towards the American people.

The voyage up the Potomac and to the Government Grounds in Washington; up the Hudson River and along Broadway; over the Mississippi and to St. Louis to do justice to these occasions would require a far greater writer than myself.

Washington, New York and finally St. Louis and home. Each of these cities has left me with an impression that I shall never forget, and a debt of gratitude which I can never repay.

THE END.

FEB. 11, 1918
President Wilson delivers his first peace address to congress, appearing unexpectedly as he has previously while making war messages. He lays down his famous "Four Basic Principles" for peace which are: 1—permanence of peace must be assured; 2—peoples, provinces no longer shall be bartered about, but; 3—every territorial settlement shall be made in the interest and benefit of the population concerned; 4—all well defined national aspirations shall be accorded the utmost satisfaction.

WILMINGTON FIVE BEATS TIGERS BY ONE POINT

HARD BATTLE IS STAGED BY LOCAL SQUAD

League Leaders Know Fear of Defeat When Circleville Starts Late Rally.

By HERMAN COMPTON

The crack of the time keepers gun was the only thing that could stop the Tigers rally in the last quarter of the basketball game at Wilmington, Friday night. The third quarter ended with Circleville trailing 20-13. Wilmington should be mighty thankful that Circleville didn't start their rally a minute sooner. The C. H. S. boys at least won a moral victory, in knowing that they came closer to beating the Clinton county crew than any other team in the league. There are still some people in doubt as to whether the Tigers were beaten or not. The basketball game was followed by a debate between the scorekeepers, Circleville score book showing each team 20 points, but it seemed as though everybody from Wilmington had a score book, so there was no use of arguing. Has Two Teams Although the score shows Circleville on the short end, they were by no means outplayed by their opponents. Wilmington had one advantage in having two teams, one about as good as the other. This advantage proved itself when the coach sent in an entire fresh team at the beginning of the half and ran their lead from 13 to 11 to 21 to 13. Then came that last quarter when the Tigers held their opponents scoreless, while they themselves made 7 points. Had it not been for Pickens being taken out of the game on fouls, it is believed the score would have been vice versa. Pickens played a splendid game, making 7 points, while holding his man to 3 points. Marion must be given a great deal of credit for holding Murphy, Wilmington's scoring ace, to one field goal and one foul. Bob Peters, although not having much to do with the Tiger scoring, played a great defensive game and broke up many a pass that would probably have ended with a two point tally on the score board. Bales was another man who could always be counted on to get the ball while it was going down the floor in Wilmington's possession. He also played a part in the Tiger offense. "Jaggy" Davis was on the floor with all the fight one player could have and accounted for the rest of the scoring. Heeter,

SPORTSMATTER BY FRANK GETTY

The question of amateurism in connection with the Olympic games is one for each individual nation to determine for itself. The Olympic authorities accept without question certification by an athlete's own country of his eligibility to compete in the games. Similarly, no nation ever thinks of protesting the amateur standing of an entrant from another nation. Each has its amateur standards, and sends to the Olympiad its amateur performers. Frequently, however, amusing differences in the matter of amateur standards as between nations come to light in an Olympic year. American standards are well known to American track and field fans and are perhaps as rigid as any in the world. An amateur athlete may receive expenses for traveling to and from a meet in which he is invited to attend, provided he has the permission of the A. A. U. to compete. Outside of that, he accepts no remuneration.

The French have an amusing system in connection with the Olympic games, which recently has come to light and which may well prove to be the subject of some discussion. Contrary to the principle of amateur sport, as viewed in the United States, the French Olympic Committee has decided that an amateur who stands a good chance of winning a place in his games at Amsterdam this summer is a lot more valuable an amateur than one who is an indifferent, albeit a willing, performer. Accordingly, a schedule of prices for amateurs has been adopted in France.

Money allotted by the French Olympic Committee for training purposes is handed out on proportion to each man's ability. A sprinter who can run 10. metres in 10 4-5 seconds will be allowed much more money for training than one who requires 11 seconds for a distance. A shot putter who can heave the 16-pound weight more than 50 feet can have many more francs to get in shape or whatever he needs than one whose best effort is 48 feet. The average French star, whether on track or field, will be given about 1,500 francs, to be spent, of course, through his club, while the dubs, who may have a chance, but are not prominent Olympic material, will receive approximately 800 francs each.

One can imagine the uproar that would be occasioned in the United States if some system of wage scales for amateurs were adopted. Charley Paddock, for instance, would want top prize among the sprinters, whereupon a dozen of his rivals who probably can whip the erstwhile "Fastest Human" would immediately jealously demand the same. Lloyd Hahn would command the highest sum for training expenses or chewing tobacco or whatever it is athletes do with their money, since Hahn is the outstanding runner at any distance. Sabin Carr would have to be well taken care of among the pole vaulters, but undoubtedly Lee Barnes of California would be in there protesting against his allowance. This probably would lead to a graduated union scale for amateurs, and to the end of amateurism.

vers. Pickens played a splendid game, making 7 points, while holding his man to 3 points. Marion must be given a great deal of credit for holding Murphy, Wilmington's scoring ace, to one field goal and one foul. Bob Peters, although not having much to do with the Tiger scoring, played a great defensive game and broke up many a pass that would probably have ended with a two point tally on the score board. VIRGINIA WHITE ASH LUMP $4.75 per ton on yard and $5.25 delivered. N. T. WELDON KOAL CO.

Russell and Dearth, all of whom saw action in the game, played fine basketball. Pickens Starts Scoring Pickens' long shot started the scoring, followed by a foul and field goal by Wilmington. The score see-sawed in this manner, the score being 7-7 at the end of first period, and Wilmington leading 13-11 at half time. In the third period, Wilmington played their best basketball and ran their lead to 21-13. It was not until there were only four minutes to play, that the Tigers got started on a campaign that almost defeated the league leaders. They ran the score to 21-20, when the game ended. The gun scared Wilmington for they didn't know what it was all about.

JACKSON LOSES TRIO OF GAMES FRIDAY NIGHT

Pickaway Teams Gain Victories in Three Contests at Township School.

Jackson Township High School journeyed to the Plains to meet defeat at the hands of the Plainsmen. The second team boys, with Wolford and Anderson playing a fast floor game, held the Jackson second team at two baskets while they rolled up eight, with a final score of 16 to 4. Pickaway's first team boys came in strong with Babb starring for Pickaway and rolling in five baskets during the game, with Rhoads and Graves making the other counters. The third quarter Jackson boys played a superior game, making 8 of their 10 points. G. Radcliffe, Sowers and Row played a hard fought game, but as the whistle blew Pickaway was leading with score of 15 to 10. Jackson girls started with a spurt, and made their lone field shot early, but excellent guarding by Hampshire, McKenzie, and Anderson, held them to the one field goal. They made their other five points on foul throws. Hinton and D. Anderson starred for Pickaway, with 8 and 4 points each. The final score was 14 to 7, in Pickaway's favor.

PELTZER BEATEN BY LANKY IOWAN

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—The fame of Dr. Otto Peltzer, German middle distance runner, was in eclipse today to a lean lanky Iowan by the name of Ray Conger.

Conger, national A. A. U. champion outdoor miler and a former prominent track man at the university of Iowa, showed his heels to the highly-touted German runner in the 1,000 meter race at the Riding club games here last night. It was the feature event of the eleventh annual indoor track and field meet of the Illinois Athletic club. A capacity crowd of 5,000 turned out for a glimpse of the fleet-footed doctor. Conger, who used to run down rabbits on the corn-growing prairies of his native state, breasted the tape a full nine yards ahead of Peltzer. Ray's time for the distance was 2:37 2-5, not a record. He ran under the colors of the I. A. C.

LANCASTER HIGH SUFFERS DEFEAT

LANCASTER, O., Feb. 11.—The local high basketball five dropped its first home game of the season here last night to Zanesville by a score of 34 to 27. Lancaster led at the end of the first quarter, 11 to 5, and at the half, 18 to 15. The end of the third period found the teams deadlocked, 24 all. Singer of Zanesville was high scorer with 11 points and Young of Lancaster runnerup with 9 points. Lancaster girls had little trouble winning from lasses representing McConellsville, 30 to 3.

Originated in "Spindle" The origin of the word "spindle" probably is derived from the "spindle side" of a house, where the unmarried women of a family did their spinning, according to an answered question in Liberty.

COOLIDGE DRAFT HIT BY SENATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The senate's adoption of the Lafollette resolution condemning a third term in the White House was regarded today by practical politicians here as constituting a death blow to the "Draft Coolidge" movement which has been kept alive by devious means since the president said "I do not choose to run." Legally, of course, the senate's action would not serve as any barrier to President Coolidge's candidacy for another term. The significance of it lies in the fact that more than two-thirds of the senate have now spoken against it, and that of this number 18 are members of the president's own party.

HARDNESS OF SKI JUMPER'S HEAD IS REVEALED IN FALL

VIENNA, Feb. 11.—(INS) —Proof of the astonishing toughness of the human constitution is found in the fact that Otto Amannshausen, champion ski jumper of Austria, lost his balance at the peak of a thirty yard leap, turned over on his head in midair and struck the ski run on his skull, slid in that position nearly fifty yards, and suffered concussion of the brain, but was not killed. Amannshausen's accident brought about the temporary closing of what was considered one of the best ski runs in Austria. It had just been opened, and was considered perfect, but none of the jumpers was able to attain more than thirty yards distance, and even the best of them fell half the time. Amannshausen was called in to give the ski run an expert test. He fell at the first jump. Physicians considered his escape from death almost miraculous.

Amannshausen's ski jumping career has been marred with tragedy, the girl to whom he was engaged to be married was killed a year ago in an accident very similar to that which put Amannshausen in the hospital now. She fell on a tree stump, was impaled and died a week later.

Grafts Bone, Repairs Broken Back, Walks

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 11.—(UP) —A narrow five-inch strip of bone taken from the shin and grafted to the spine has enabled Richard Deveraux, 22, of Felt's Mills, who suffered a broken back, to walk again. Deveraux fell from the roof of a building here and for several weeks was completely paralyzed following spinal fracture. Dr. Muray M. Gardner and Dr. Howard N. Cooper removed the piece of shin bone and grafted it to Deveraux's spine. He improved to the extent that the paralysis disappeared and he is able to walk a bit now.

VISIT CHURCH IS PLEA MADE BY ROOSEVELT

Former President Said There Are Enough Holidays, So Give Sunday to God.

Theodore Roosevelt says, "There are enough holidays for most of us. Sunday differs from other holidays in the fact that there are fifty-two of them every year. Therefore, on Sundays go to church."

"Yes, I know all the excuses. I know that one can worship the Creator in a grove of trees, or by a running brook, or in a man's own house just as well as in a church. But I also know as a matter of cold facts the average man does not thus worship or thus dedicate himself! If he stays away from the church he does not spend his time in good works or in lofty meditation."

Mr. Roosevelt speaks with such confidence and authority that his words should be heeded. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH SUNDAY?

Noted Critic Pays Tribute to "The Way of All Flesh," Coming to City.

The world's greatest character actor in the most painstakingly perfect characterization of his life.

The soft lights in the studio projection room flashed on like a mechanical dawn following the final fadeout on the screen; for a few poignant seconds there had been absolute silence.

Then the voice again in the half light; a whisper like an echo:

"A perfect performance."

The tribute came from a nationally known motion picture critic; a man who has seen more films, good, bad, and impossible, than any other person connected with the industry. It was made in the laboratory projection room of Paramount's West Coast Studio. The critic had just witnessed a preview of "The Way of All Flesh," in which Emil Jannings, the supreme international film artist, makes his American debut.

This wonder picture, acclaimed everywhere as one of the finest films of the year will be shown at the Metropolitan theater Monday. Belle Bennett, the star of "Stella Dallas" and Phyllis Haver, who made fame and fortune for herself in "What Price Glory," head the supporting cast. "The Way of All Flesh" was directed by Victor Fleming, produced of "The Rough Riders." Donald, Keith and Fred Kohler play important parts.

There are 16,337 ways of making a living enumerated in a dictionary of occupational terms issued by the British government. Among the odd occupations followed in London are: Slossers, wizzers, woflers, peuchers, yonkers, swagers, tubbles, towvers and toe flatteners.

Seek New List Of Beauties of World

LONDON, Feb. 11—(UP) —

Comeliness experts here are once more trying to solve the problem as to who are the world's most beautiful women.

One gives the following three as topping the lists for all time: Queen Nefertiti, the Egyptian; Mono Lisa; and Mrs. Davenport (as portrayed by Romney).

Another expert is of the opinion that the three most beautiful women of modern times are: Viscountess Curzon; Lady Nunburnholme, and Lady Brownlow.

It is worthy of note that Lady Brownlow, formerly Miss Kitty Kinloch is a member of the Davenport family; also that Mrs. Richard Norton, another of London's beautiful women, belongs to the Davenport line.

WILMINGTON FIVE BEATS TIGER BY ONE POINT

HARD BATTLE IS STAGED BY LOCAL SQUAD

League Leaders Know Fear of Defeat When Circleville Starts Late Rally.

By HERMAN COMPTON

The crack of the time keepers gun was the only thing that could stop the Tigers rally in the last quarter of the basketball game at Wilmington, Friday night. The third quarter ended with Circleville trailing 20-13.

Wilmington should be mighty thankful that Circleville didn't start their rally a minute sooner. The C. H. S. boys at least won a moral victory, in knowing that they came closer to beating the Clinton county crew than any other team in the league. There are still some people in doubt as to whether the Tigers were beaten or not. The basketball game was followed by a debate between the scorekeepers, Circleville score book showing each team 20 points, but it seemed as though everybody from Wilmington had a score book, so there was no use of arguing.

Has Two Teams

Although the score shows Circleville on the short end, they were by no means outplayed by their opponents. Wilmington had one advantage in having two teams, one about as good as the other. This advantage proved itself when the coach sent in an entire fresh team at the beginning of the half and ran their lead from 13 to 11 to 21 to 13.

Then came that last quarter when the Tigers held their opponents scoreless, while they themselves made 7 points. Had it not been for Pickens being taken out of the game on fouls, it is believed the score would have been vice versa.

SPORTSMATTER

FRANK GETTY

The question of amateurism in connection with the Olympic games is one for each individual nation to determine for itself.

The Olympic authorities accept without question certification by an athlete's own country of his eligibility to compete in the games.

Similarly, no nation ever thinks of protesting the amateur standing of an entrant from another nation. Each has its amateur standards, and sends to the Olympiad its amateur performers.

Frequently, however, amusing differences in the matter of amateur standards as between nations come to light in an Olympic year.

American standards are well known to American track and field fans and are perhaps as rigid as any in the world. An amateur athlete may receive expenses for traveling to and from a meet in which he is invited to attend, provided he has the permission of the A. A. U. to compete. Outside of that, he accepts no remuneration.

The French have an amusing system in connection with the Olympic games, which recently has come to light and which may well prove to be the subject of some discussion.

Contrary to the principle of amateur sport, as viewed in the United States, the French Olympic Committee has decided that an amateur who stands a good chance of winning a place in the games at Amsterdam this summer is a lot more valuable an amateur than one who is an indifferent, albeit a willing, performer.

Accordingly, a schedule of prices for amateurs has been adopted in France.

Money allotted by the French Olympic Committee for training purposes is handed out on proportion to each man's ability.

A sprinter who can run 100 metres in 10 4-5 seconds will be allowed much more money for training than one who requires 11 seconds for a distance.

A shot putter who can heave the 16-pound weight more than 50 feet can have many more francs to get in shape or whatever he needs than one whose best effort is 48 feet.

The average French star, whether on track or field, will be given about 1,500 francs, to be spent, of course, through his club, while the dubs, who may have a chance, but are not prominent Olympic material, will receive approximately 800 francs each.

One can imagine the uproar that would be occasioned in the United States if some system of wage scales for amateurs were adopted.

Charley Paddock, for instance, would want top prize among the sprinters, whereupon a dozen of his rivals who probably can whip the erstwhile "Fastest Human" would immediately jealously demand the same.

Lloyd Hahn would command the highest sum for training expenses or chewing tobacco or whatever it is athletes do with their money, since Hahn is the outstanding runner at any distance.

Sabin Carr would have to be well taken care of among the pole vaulters, but undoubtedly Lee Barnes of California would be in there protesting against his allowance.

This probably would lead to a graduated union scale for amateurs, and to the end of amateurism.

Pickens played a splendid game, making 7 points, while holding his man to 3 points. Marion must be given a great deal of credit for holding Murphy, Wilmington's scoring ace, to one field goal and one foul. —ob Peters, although not having much to do with the Tiger scoring, played a great defensive game and broke up many a pass that would probably have ended with a two point tally on the score board.

Bales was another man who could always be counted on to get the ball while it was going down the floor in Wilmington's possession. He also played a part in the Tiger offense. "Jaggy" Davis was on the floor with all the fight one player could have and accounted for the rest of the scoring. Heeter,

Russell and Dearth, all of whom saw action in the game, played fine basketball.

Pickens Starts Scoring Pickens' long shot started the scoring, followed by a foul and field goal by Wilmington. The score saw-sawed in this manner, the score being 7-7 at the end of first period, and Wilmington leading 13-11 at half time.

In the third period, Wilmington played their best basketball and ran their lead to 21-13. It was not until there were only four minutes to play, that the Tigers got started on a campaign that almost defeated the league leaders. They ran the score to 21-20, when the game ended. The gun scared Wilmington for they didn't know what it was all about.

JACKSON LOSES TRIO OF GAMES FRIDAY NIGHT

Pickaway Teams Gain Victories in Three Contests at Township School.

Jackson Township High School journeyed to the Plains to meet defeat at the hands of the Plainsmen.

The second team boys, with Wolford and Anderson playing a fast floor game, held the Jackson second team at two baskets while they rolled up eight, with a final score of 16 to 4.

Pickaway's first team boys came in strong with Babb starring for Pickaway and rolling in five baskets during the game, with Rhoads and Graves making the other counters. The third quarter Jackson boys played a superior game, making 8 of their 10 points. G. Radcliffe, Sowers and Row played a hard fought game, but as the whistle blew Pickaway was leading with score of 15 to 10.

Jackson girls started with a spurt, and made their lone field shot early, but excellent guarding by Hampshire, McKenzie, and Anderson, held them to the one field goal. They made their other five points on foul throws. Hinton and D. Anderson starred for Pickaway, with 8 and 4 points each.

The final score was 14 to 7, in Pickaway's favor.

PELTZER BEATEN BY LANKY IOWAN

CHICAGO, Feb. 11—The fame of Dr. Otto Peltzer, German middle distance runner, was in eclipse today to a lean lanky Iowan by the name of Ray Conger.

Conger, national A. A. U. champion outdoor mile and a former prominent track man at the university of Iowa, showed his heels to the highly-touted German runner in the 1,000 meter race at the Riding club games here last night.

It was the feature event of the eleventh annual indoor track and field meet of the Illinois Athletic Club. A capacity crowd of 5,000 turned out for a glimpse of the fleet-footed doctor.

Conger, who used to run down rabbits on the corn-growing prairies of his native state, breasted the tape a full nine yards ahead of Peltzer. Ray's time for the distance was 2:37 2-5, not a record. He ran under the colors of the I. A. C.

LANCASTER HIGH SUFFERS DEFEAT

LANCASTER, O., Feb. 11—The local high basketball five dropped its first home game of the season here last night to Zanesville by a score of 34 to 27. Lancaster led at the end of the first quarter, 11 to 5, and at the half, 18 to 15. The end of the third period found the teams deadlocked, 24 all.

Singer of Zanesville was high scorer with 11 points and Young of Lancaster runnerup with 9 points.

Lancaster girls had little trouble winning from lasses representing McConnelville, 30 to 3.

The origin of the word "spindster" probably is derived from the "spindle side" of a house, where the unmarried women of a family did their spinning, according to an unverified question in Liberty.

HARDNESS OF SKI JUMPER'S HEAD IS REVEALED IN FALL

VIENNA, Feb. 11—(INS)—

Proof of the astonishing toughness of the human constitution is found in the fact that Otto Amannshausen, champion ski jumper of Austria, lost his balance at the peak of a thirty yard leap, turned over on his head in midair and struck the ski run on his skull, slid in that position nearly fifty yards, and suffered concussion of the brain, but was not killed.

Amannshausen's accident brought about the temporary closing of what was considered one of the best ski runs in Austria. It had just been opened, and was considered perfect, but none of the jumpers was able to attain more than thirty yards distance, and even the best of them fell half the time. Amannshausen was called in to give the ski run an expert test. He fell at the first jump. Physicians considered his escape from death almost miraculous.

Amannshausen's ski jumping career has been marred with tragedy, the girl to whom he was engaged to be married was killed a year ago in an accident very similar to that which put Amannshausen in the hospital now. She fell on a tree stump, was impaled and died a week later.

Grafts Bone, Repairs Broken Back, Walks

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 11—(UP)—A narrow five-inch strip of bone taken from the shin and grafted to the spine has enabled Richard Deveraux, 22, of Fells Mills, who suffered a broken back, to walk again.

Deveraux fell from the roof of a building here and for several weeks was completely paralyzed following spinal fracture.

Dr. Muray M. Gardner and Dr. Howard N. Cooper removed the piece of shin bone and grafted it to Deveraux's spine. He improved to the extent that the paralysis disappeared and he is able to walk a bit now.
